

'Hysterical reporting'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has declared that he doesn't let "frantic, hysterical reporting" by the news media get under his skin because "one can only be angry about those he respects."

The President also said his handling of the current Mideast crisis shows "the tougher it gets, the cooler I get."

In some of the strongest language of his presidency, Nixon bitterly assailed at his Friday night news conference the reporting of his administration.

"I have never seen such outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting in 27 years of public life," Nixon said.

"... when people are pounded night after night with that kind of frantic, hysterical reporting, it naturally shakes their confidence," he said.

"Yet I should point out that even in this week when many thought that the President was shell-shocked, unable to act, the President acted decisively in the interests of peace and the interests of the country, and I can assure you...these shocks will not affect me in my doing my job."

At another point, the President was asked "how you are bearing up emotionally under the stress of recent events?"

"Those who saw me during the Middle East crisis thought I bore up rather well," Nixon responded. "...the tougher it gets, the cooler I get."

The President added that he has learned to expect to have his honesty questioned unfairly. "It has been my lot throughout my political life, and I suppose because I have been through so much, that may be one of the reasons that when I have to face an international crisis, I have what it takes."

After Nixon bluntly singled out television news and commentary for criticism, a network correspondent asked: "What is it about the television of these past weeks and months that has so aroused your anger?"

"Don't get the impression that you arouse my anger," Nixon replied. "One can only be angry about those he respects."

Later in the news conference, Nixon said he didn't want to leave the impression "that I don't respect the reporters."

"What I was simply saying was this: that when a commentator takes a bit of news and then, with knowledge of what the facts are, distorts it viciously, I have no respect for that individual."

In contrast to some previous news conferences, especially the one Aug. 22 when he first responded to revelations of the Senate Watergate investigation, Nixon's voice never wavered and he showed no outward signs of nervousness.

He occasionally made relaxed gestures with his hands, but most of the time he stood behind the rostrum, his feet spread apart and his hands gripping the padded sides of the custom-built lectern.

New prosecutor to be restrained

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says he'll permit the appointment of a new Watergate special prosecutor next week, but one who will be under the same restraints defied by the ousted Archibald Cox.

"We will not provide presidential documents to a special prosecutor," Nixon told a televised news conference Friday night. It was that issue that triggered Nixon's firing of Cox just a week ago.

In announcing his decision to let Acting Atty. Gen. Robert H. Bork name a new prosecutor, the President said:

"It is time for those who are who are innocent to be cleared...I have no greater interest than to see that the new special prosecutor has the cooperation from the executive branch and the independence that he needs to bring about that conclusion."

Bork, in a Friday interview with a small group of newsmen, suggested Nixon's insistence that the new prosecutor avoid any court battle for additional presidential tapes or documents, could lead to another blow-up like the one that led to the Cox firing.

Speaking in advance of Nixon's news conference, Bork declared, "I would regard no legal procedure as out of bounds."

Asked what would happen if he saw evidence of White House interference with the new prosecutor, Bork said, "I couldn't tolerate it."

Remaining open was the possibility that Congress might reject Nixon's plan to name a new prosecutor who would be an employee of the executive branch. A majority of the Senate joined Friday in sponsoring legislation that would mandate U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica to appoint a prosecutor who would be independent of both the Congress and the White House.

Nixon suggested Congress would abandon the measure.

William D. Ruckelshaus, fired as deputy attorney general when he refused to dismiss Cox on Nixon's order, said on a San Francisco TV talk show Friday he favors a new, independent office of the special prosecutor.

Nixon, before announcing he would accept a new prosecutor, although he abolished the job in ordering Cox's firing, said White House lawyers will meet Tuesday with Sirica to work out court-ordered delivery to the judge of nine tapes of presidential conversations sought by the ousted prosecutor.

The tapes are of conversations in which Nixon reportedly discussed the Watergate scandal with key assistants.

The firings of Cox and Ruckelshaus, and the near-simultaneous resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson, brought strong congressional pressure for a start on possible impeachment proceedings against Nixon.

Asked how he reacted to demands that he resign or be impeached, Nixon said he has a constitutional right "to dismiss anybody in the federal government," and added, "I intend to continue to carry out, to the best of my ability, the responsibilities I was elected to carry out last November."

As pressure for impeachment mounted, Nixon himself abandoned the plan Tuesday and, in a dramatic policy reversal, agreed to obey a federal court order requiring him to turn over the tapes to Sirica, who will screen them before they are made available to a federal grand jury.

Nixon says Rebozo is honest man

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says his close friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo is "a totally honest man."

But a federal agency is considering whether to suspend him as president of a Florida bank, and Nixon himself opened new questions about why Rebozo kept a $100,000 contribution from billionaire Howard Hughes for three years.

Nixon was asked at his news conference Friday night about Rebozo and Hughes' $100,000, which Rebozo returned to the wealthy recluse this year.

Rebozo "showed, I think, very good judgment in doing what he did," said Nixon.

Nixon said after Rebozo received the contribution, "the Hughes Company, as you all know, had an internal fight of massive proportions, and he felt that such a contribution to the campaign might prove to be embarrassing."

"At the conclusion of the (1972) campaign, he decided that it would be in the best interests of everybody concerned rather than to turn the money over to them be used in the '74 campaigns, to return it intact," Nixon said.

The Hughes organization dispute, however, occurred in December 1970, more than two years before Rebozo eventually returned the money. Hughes officials involved in the twin $50,000 donations have differed on whether the money was even intended for the 1972 campaign, or was rather for 1970 congressional elections.

Nixon did not explain and was not asked why Rebozo kept the money so long.

Nixon also explained that he personally "refused to have any discussion of contributions...before the election I did not want to have any information from anybody with regard to campaign contributions."

A 1970 letter to Nixon from a lobbyist made public earlier this week, informed the President that milk producers were preparing to contribute $2 million to his 1972 campaign. The milk producers subsequently won a price increase. The contribution-price hike matter is now the subject of a court suit.

Nixon said he thought Rebozo's handling of the Hughes money "is a pretty good indication that he is a totally honest man, which he is."

Hours earlier, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said it would consider next week whether to suspend Rebozo as president of Key Biscayne Bank and Trust Co. in connection with the bank's acceptance of stolen stock as collateral for a $195,000 loan.

Bank officials have denied they knew the stock used in the 1965 transaction was stolen.

Rebozo is Nixon's next-door neighbor at Key Biscayne, Fla., and was recently disclosed as a partner with Robert Abplanalp, another Nixon friend, in the financing and subsequent partial purchase of the President's San Clemente, Calif., estate.

Mideast quiet as peace unit lands

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arab and Israeli guns were silent today as U.N. peacekeeping troops continued to move into Cairo. Russia said on Friday it had sent "representatives" to the Middle East to observe the cease-fire.

In Washington, President Nixon told a news conference that the United States and the Soviet Union would use their influence to bring about a negotiated settlement in the Middle East.

The President said the two superpowers have moved from the gravest crisis in a decade "to a great step toward real peace in the Middle East." He said the Mideast cease-fire seems to be holding.

The Moscow announcement prompted little concern in Washington. State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said the Soviet observers were not combat personnel. And Nixon said the United States also would send observers, if the United Nations requested it, "and we have reason to expect we will receive such a request."

The first contingent of U.N. peacekeeping troops — Austrian, Finnish and Swedish soldiers from the U.N. force on Cyprus — began landing at Cairo airport Friday night. Six hundred U.N. troops were expected to be in Cairo by dawn.

The troops, which the Security Council voted Thursday to send to the Middle East, wore camouflage uniforms and caps of United Nations blue and carried automatic weapons. Diplomatic sources said U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim asked the Security Council on Friday to authorize an eventual strength of 7,000 men for the force.

No fighting was reported late Friday. Earlier in the day, Israel said elements of Egypt's 3rd Army fought Israeli forces for three hours in a vain effort to escape from their cut-off position in the Sinai. An Israeli spokesman said a large number of Egyptian tanks were destroyed.

Israeli officers, meanwhile, claimed their troops have been occupying most of Suez City, the strategic gate to the southern end of the Suez Canal, since before the first U.N. cease-fire on Monday.

"The city has been almost completely occupied except for a few pockets of resistance — maybe a few hundred Egyptian soldiers in scattered units that can no longer be called a force," an Israeli lieutenant colonel said.

Associated Press correspondent Jon Broder reported from the Syrian front that the situation there was quiet and that U.N. observers were setting up new posts in the area.

U.S. military units, meanwhile, remained on the alert status Nixon ordered Thursday. Nixon told his news conference Friday night that the United States received information indicating the Soviet Union planned to send a very substantial military force to the Mideast.

In an apparent reference to the alert, Brezhnev said in his Moscow speech that East-West cooperation would not be advanced by "an artificial heightening of passions through dissemination of various kinds of fantastic inventions on the intentions of the Soviet Union in the Middle East."

Nixon gets 'cool'

President Nixon calls for questions Friday night during his White House press conference. Nixon answered questions on Watergate and the Middle East.

Democrats dissatisfied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new burst of Democratic criticism has greeted President Nixon's latest attempt to quell the Watergate turmoil.

Many members of Congress, commenting after the President's news conference Friday night, credited Nixon with diplomatic success in reducing tensions in the Middle East but said he failed to end suspicions about his willingness to permit a complete and independent Watergate investigation.

Others complained of a new attack by the President on the news media in general and television reporting and commentary in particular. Still others had specific suggestions.

Vice President-designate Gerald R. Ford suggested the President name former Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson to replace Archibald Cox as special prosecutor.

Richardson resigned last Saturday night after refusing a presidential order to fire Cox.

Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the vice chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, suggested a "duo special prosecutor" be named.

"Two special prosecutors could be named — one by the President and one by Congress, one a Democrat and one a Republican — both of whom could not be fired without congressional consent," Baker said.

"I am glad the President has agreed to name a special prosecutor. It should be done under such arrangements to assure total independence," remarked Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

Fifty-three senators, including seven Republicans, are sponsoring legislation to authorize U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica to name a special prosecutor independent of both the White House and the Congress.

Many of those senators, reached for comment after the news conference, said they saw no reason to stop that effort.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said Nixon tried to divert the public by a slashing and unjustified attack on the news media. "The people need to be assured that he will not use his powers to block the truth," Muskie said. "He did not give us that reassurance tonight."

"The President's definition of independence means either accept his offered compromise or be fired," said Rep. John Culver, D-Iowa, one of 102 House co-sponsors of the bill authorizing Sirica to name a prosecutor.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the Senate Watergate committee, said he believes the Senate will pass a bill in

One key Lucey bill OK'd

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Legislature adjourned its fall session early today after passing only one of the measures declared musts by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

The Assembly gave final approval to a bill which paves the way for federal takeover Jan. 1 of aids for the aged, blind and disabled.

That measure would authorize the expenditure of about $19 million in state money to keep aid payments at their present level by subsidizing federal funding. The federal government has promised additional funds to states which provide such supplements.

The bill does not include, however, a provision which would have allowed distribution of contraceptives to welfare recipients regardless of their age and marital status. Federal officials have warned that lack of such a provision could cost Wisconsin some Aid to Families with Dependent Children funds.

Lawmakers failed to enact legislation declared musts by Lucey which would provide state fuel allocation authority, require certificates of need for health care institutions, reform campaign financing and regulate power plant site selection.

The two houses are not scheduled to come back until Jan. 29. But there is speculation that Gov. Patrick J. Lucey will call lawmakers back to work, possibly as early as next week, to at least act upon the fuel bill before Wisconsin's winter sets in.

"I haven't spoken with Gov. Lucey yet," said gubernatorial aide Steve Holmgren. "But it is very likely he will call a special session in view of the failure to pass an energy bill."

The fuel allocation bill, which would give the state Public Service Commission broad new powers to pinpoint and resolve fuel shortages, was adopted by the Assembly on a 66-33 vote.

But lower house lawmakers twice rejected motions to move the measure to the Senate, and by the time they approved the move the upper house had already gone home.

The votes which temporarily kept the proposal locked in the Assembly came after Minority Leader John Shabaz, R-New Berlin, urged the lower house to wait for a Senate proposal dealing with the same subject.

The upper house version, however, would give fuel allocation authority to the state Department of Agriculture rather than the PSC and would cut off that authority next spring.

The certificate of needs bill, meanwhile, cleared the Senate, but the Assembly — apparently determined to amend the upper house version — voted 62-36 to postpone action on the bill.

That bill would require health care institutions to obtain permission from the Division of Health Policy and Planning before undertaking a capital expenditure of more than $100,000, changing bed capacities or substantially changing services.

Proponents of the measure claim it is needed to prevent further growth of hospital and nursing home facilities in areas which are already oversupplied with them.

Lawmakers did not even try on the final day of the fall session to grapple

Abdul-Jabbar paces Bucks past 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —Philadelphia 76er center, LeRoy Ellis, admits he can't stop the kingpin of the Milwaukee Bucks scoring machine, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"I played him as well as I could," Ellis said Friday night after Milwaukee extended the Sixers 98-92 in a National Basketball Association game here.

"You can slow him down, but not stop him," Ellis said of Abdul-Jabbar.

The 7-foot-2 Milwaukee center pumped in 35 points and came down with 18 rebounds. He blocked six Philadelphia shots and paced the NBA Midwest Division leaders to their seventh season win against one loss.

"Jabbar is devastating," said 76er

Coach Gene Shue.

The game at the Philadelphia Spectrum was nip and tuck into the final quarter: 76ers up 50-38 in the second period; 76ers by one at the end of three; Milwaukee up 63-80 with 7:44 remaining.

Then the Bucks caught fire. In two minutes they collected eight points while Philadelphia missed consistently.

The 76ers fought back with less than five minutes on the clock. Two jumpers put Philadelphia within striking distance, 91-86, but Milwaukee hung on.

The game was the 76ers' fifth loss. They've won twice.

"We took away their break," said Bucks Coach Larry Costello, "and what kept them in was (Fred) Carter and (Fred) Boyd making some tough, long shots."

Carter made nine field goals and Boyd five for Philadelphia. But Steve Mix, who had scored a career high of 38 points two nights earlier, connected on only one of seven baskets.

"We took it away, crowding him, forcing him to the right and making him come back to shoot his left hand into our face," Terry Driscoll said of his Curtis Perry's guarding of Mix.

Pats capitalize on OW miscues

OSHKOSH — Appleton East took advantage of two Oshkosh West miscues in the opening segment by converting them into the only scores they needed to produce a 13-0 Fox Valley Association victory in the finale for both teams here Friday night.

The game started out as a game of "here-I-don't-want-it-you-can-have-it," as Patriot signal caller Bob Marx threw interceptions on his team's two initial possessions.

West's first mistake occurred as Larry Tesch fumbled a lateral which led to a 28-yard touchdown run by the Pats' Kerry Frank. Jim Bevers added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead at the 8:36 mark of the first quarter.

Later in the period, the Indians fumbled again, this time at the East 33. Bruce Discher's fumble was recovered by John Roth, and on first down Dave Gerard rambled 67 yards for the Patriots' second score. Bevers' kick was no good, and East had its final points on the board.

The Indians, operating without their first string backfield, lacked the offensive punch to get the ball into scoring territory against the stalwart East defense. Their deepest penetration came in the third quarter as they managed to get to the Patriot ten, but the defense stiffened and East took over.

Gerard and Frank were almost even in rushing yards as Gerard rushed six times for 81 yards, and Frank gained 82 yards in eleven carries.

The Patriots close out their season with a 3-4 FVA slate, while the Indians finish at 2-5.

Xavier rally stops Jets

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN

Post-Crescent sports editor

Able to gain only 24 yards in the entire first half, Appleton Xavier came out smoking for the final two quarters to score 20 points and log a 20-13, season-ending victory over Manitowoc Roncalli at Goodland Field Friday night.

The Hawks' Mike Schindhelm sprinted 81 yards with the second-half kickoff to reduce his team's deficit from 7-0 to 7-6. That spectacular open field effort was cited by Coach Bob Pliska as the game's turning point. "It gave us the juice to go the rest of the way," exclaimed Pliska just after his team had completed its third straight victory and squared its Fox Valley Christian Conference record at 4-4.

Neither the Hawks' failure to convert after the Schindhelm touchdown (a gamble for a 2-point PAT was stymied) nor another score by the Jets (on a 1-yard run by versatile Jim Vnuk) could stay the newly-ignited Xavier momentum. Less than two minutes after the second Roncalli TD, Hawk quarterback Dick Boya and receiver Bob Mullen collaborated for a second Hawk "home run." On the fly pattern, Boya rifled a pass to Mullen, who took it in stride at the Jet 5 and scored easily to complete a 44-yard play. It proved to be Xavier's only completion of the game (in three tries).

The opportunistic Hawks then turned a broken PAT play into two points and a never-to-be-surrendered lead. With Schindhelm back to kick, the snap was low to Roy McCanna, the holder. McCanna took the ball, rolled to his right and drilled it to Mullen in the end zone for a 14-13 lead.

With only 33 seconds left in the game, Greg Karras capped an 80-yard, chew-up-the-clock scoring drive with a 5-yard insurance TD. It also capped another prodigious rushing night (108 yards in 17 tries) for the bullish Karras.

The first half had been a totally different ball game, with Roncalli in complete command. But, despite the fact that the Jets outgained Xavier, 190 yards to 24, in that first half they were able to put only seven points on the board (a 3-yard run by Joe Pekarske and a PAT kick by Vnuk. Roncalli ran 37 plays—exclusive of punts—to only 12 for Xavier. One Roncalli drive for more points ended with a Tom Flood-strand interception on the Hawks' 12.

The Xavier defensive unit also rose to significant heights in the final moments of the second quarter to save themselves going into intermission with a 2-touchdown deficit. With fourth-and-3 for a TD, the Jets sent Pekarske into the line on the final play of the half. He was stopped 6 inches short of his objective by the swarming defenders.

Except for that show of defensive enthusiasm, the Hawks were "flat" in the first half, Pliska admitted. "Once we were able to stop their 'super duper' pass, we were able to slow down their running game," he noted. The Jets managed only 42 yards rushing in the second half. And though, sophomore QB Greg Cavanaugh threw for 89 yards in the final two periods, he had two crucial passes picked off by the Hawks. Boya speared one on the Xavier 38 in the third quarter, and Dan Tardiff picked off the other at the Roncalli 37 to snuff out Roncalli's final hopes in the last 27 seconds.

On the whole, however, Cavanaugh was an impressive passer, as he completed 11 of 19 for 188 yards. In all, the Jets posted a yardage margin of 321 to 173. Roncalli finished at 3-5 in the FVCC.

On Schindhelm's tide-turning kickoff return, he took the ball at his own 19 and veered to his right while picking up steam. At mid-field, the swift senior pulled out of a defender's grasp and had it all his own way the rest of the trip.

Just prior to Xavier's ball-control drive to the game's final TD, Vnuk missed a 25-yard field goal which was designed to erase the Hawks' 14-13 lead.

Kimberly ties Rockets

BY ROGER PITT

Post-Crescent staff writer

KIMBERLY — The finale of the 1973 Fox Valley Association football season for Neenah and Kimberly was typical of the type of season its been for the two teams.

Neenah, 3-2-2, exploded in the first half to take a 14-0 lead. The Papermakers, on the verge of being counted out, picked themselves up and narrowly missed scoring an upset win as dependable Mike Verbeten missed two field goal attempts in the final 23 seconds. As a result the game ended at 14-all. Kimberly finishes with a surprising 2-4-1 mark, while Neenah eliminated itself from the FVA title picture in another frustrating game.

The Rockets claimed a one-sided victory in the statistic column, while Kimberly coach Jim Bohne proclaimed a moral victory for his team.

"We were really getting pounded in the first half but I felt we hit them just as hard in the second half. I'd say we won a moral victory against a very good team," Bohne said.

"You can't fault Verbeten for missing those kicks. That's a pretty good distance (45 and 40 yards) for a high school kid and he really works hard ... he plays both ways and goes the entire game."

"We sucked in our guts at halftime and put out a good effort. I thought our defense really was hitting in the second half."

"No, we never thought of it. Our defense was getting us the ball and with a good kicker we went for the tie," Bohne replied, when questioned about going for a two-point conversion for a 15-14 lead.

Kimberly was held after the opening kickoff and the Rockets took over on their own 34. Dave Eccles made the Papermakers conscious of blasts into the middle as he carried seven straight times for 25 yards — all on dives into the line. Tom Spice then hit into the line for two yards and then took an option pitchout from Alex Maslow around left end for 37 yards to the Kimberly two. Eccles hit the middle twice before scoring with 4:15 left in the first quarter.

A big extra point was missed at this time. Paul Erickson was dead-center on his PAT attempt but a Neenah player was detected not wearing his mouth guard and 15 yards was marched off. Erickson's second kick was short.

Early in the second quarter Neenah took over on its 41 following a Kimberly punt. Neenah maneuvered to the 20 in eight plays before Frank Douglas was dropped for a 2-yard loss. Spice took a handoff and rolled to his right on the halfback option. Mark Hanseter cut down the left sideline and fielded Spice's aerial on about the two and scampered into the end zone untouched with 4:11 remaining in the half for a 12-0 lead. Maslow passed to Hanseter to make it 14-0.

Neenah was held after the second half kick and was forced to punt. The punter hit the ball poorly and it came up to the short man, Brian Baumgarten, on the Kimberly 36.

Baumgarten broke up the middle, sliced to the right sideline and picked up several good downfield blocks as he scampered 64 yards for Kimberly's initial touchdown with 9:28 left in the third quarter. Verbeten booted the PAT.

Neenah was held after two first downs and Kimberly took over on its 25. The Papermakers finally gained their initial first down of the game with 3:24 left in the third segment when Neenah was called for a personal foul.

Kimberly punted to the Neenah 17 and the defense again stopped the Rockets. On fourth and one, the Rockets elected to try a punt. The snap from center bounced back to Maslow who picked the ball up and returned to the line of scrimmage still a yard short.

Randy Van Hout, Karl Lamers and Tom Wolter took turns carrying the ball 16 yards to the 10. Dick Van Grinsven, using the quarterback draw, ran to the one-foot line and then carried over for the touchdown with 9:14 left. Verbeten tied the game with his kick.

Neenah managed to move the ball for short gains twice, but the last scoring threat came from Kimberly. Lamers set up the threat by recovering a Spice fumble on the 50.

Kimberly moved to the 28 with 23 seconds left. Verbeten's kick from the 35 was just short of the cross bar but Neenah was offside on the play giving the Papermakers a first down on the 24. Verbeten again kicked, this time from the 30, but his attempt was low and sailed under the cross bar.

Eccles was the individual standout with 113 yards in 29 carries and Spice gained 86 in 12 tries. Neenah outgained Kimberly 259 yards to 68 and had 13 first downs to four.

Van Lier, Bulls tough on Rockets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
It's been Chicago's misfortune to be located in the same division with the Milwaukee Bucks.
And it was Calvin Murphy's misfortune to be located on the same basketball floor with Norm Van Lier Friday night.
The Bulls made it unpleasant for the Houston Rockets by winning their fifth straight game 121-113. Yet the Bulls still trail the Bucks by one game in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association.
And Van Lier made it unpleasant for Murphy by engaging in a wild slugging match.
For his fist fight with Murphy, Van Lier was ejected from the game while Murphy stayed around to score 32 points.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Boston downed New York 113-101; Buffalo beat Cleveland 104-97; Milwaukee defeated Philadelphia 98-92; Kansas CityOmaha tripped Phoenix 98-93; Los Angeles nipped Detroit 94-92; Golden State outscored Seattle 117-110 and Portland crushed Atlanta 127-110.
Celtics 113, Knicks 101
John Havlicek scored 34 points and Dave Cowens netted 29, rallying the Celtics to a 113-101 victory over the Knicks.
Havlicek sparked a 16-4 scoring spree in the final period that helped carry Boston to its triumph over the defending world champions.

Kings 98, Suns 93
Rookie Ron Behagen and veteran Sam Lacey paced the Kansas City-Omaha Kings, playing without high-scoring guard Nate Archibald, to a 98-93 victory over the Phoenix Suns.
Behagen, out of the University of Minnesota, scored a pro high of 20 points and had 11 rebounds. Lacey chipped in with 19 points, 12 rebounds and five steals.
Braves 104, Cavaliers 97
Jim McMillian scored 14 points in the fourth quarter on his way to a 36-point performance and helped the Braves to a 104-97 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Warriors 117, SuperSonics 110
Cazzie Russell pored in 41 points, 14 in the final quarter, and paced the Golden State Warriors to a 117-110 over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Lakers 94, Pistons 92
Laker guards Gail Goodrich and Jerry West split 57 points and control, pacing the Lakers to a 94-92 victory over the Pistons.

Trail Blazers 127, Hawks 110
Sidney Wicks, hitting on all 12 of his free throws, scored 30 points to lead Portland to a 127-110 victory over Atlanta.

The Trail Blazers took control of the game in the third period when they outscored the Hawks 37-21.

Dance canceled

The Halloween Harvest Hard Time dance scheduled tonight by the Ladies of Sacred Heart Parish has been canceled, according to publicity chairman Mrs. Gerald Altenhofen.

It will rain Saturday in the Great Lakes area and in the East. There also will be rain and showers in the Pacific Northwest. It will be warmer in the Southwest and in the northern Plains states. It will be cold in the Northwest and cool in the Midwest. (P Wirephoto map)

Autumn's splendor fades

It is beginning to look as if autumn splendor has come to an end. Showers and possible snow flurries have been predicted, which would certainly douse Wisconsin's Indian summer.
Temperatures tonight are expected to dip into the upper 30s and will not go much higher than the mid-40s on Sunday.
There is a definite promise of cloudy skies tonight and a chance of rain. Variable cloudiness is promised for Sunday, but the chances of getting rain are almost nil.
The extended outlook for the state shows a chance of a few showers in the north Tuesday, with conditions otherwise fair and dry Monday through Wednesday.

The Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. reported Appleton reached a high of 59 and a low of 48. The barometer reading was 30.08 and falling. Winds were out of the east, 4-8 m.p.h., and the dewpoint was 41. Humidity is 79 per cent.
Sunset today at 5:51 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 7:24 a.m. Moonset this evening at 6:26 p.m. First Quarter on Nov. 3.
The constellation Orion is in the southeast at 1:38 a.m. Above it are Aldebaran and the Pleiades, north of it are Saturn and the Twins and below Orion is Sirius, the brightest star.

Hadl wary of Vikings

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Quarterback John Hadl and the Los Angeles Rams consider the Minnesota Vikings dynamite, but no doubt have plans to defuse them.
"The Vikings are a dynamite football team," observed Hadl, the National football League's No. 1 rated quarterback. "There are always ways to approach a defense ... certain things you can try to do."
Hadl isn't saying just how the nign-powered Ram offense will approach the Minnesota defense that has given up only 75 points in six games as the NFL's final two undefeated teams collide at Metropolitan Stadium Sunday at 2 p.m., EST.
But it's no secret how Philadelphia and San Francisco tried to stop the Vikings: the short passes and the run.
The Vikings gave up 31 passes to Steve Spurrier of the 49ers and 23 to Roman Gabriel of the Eagles. Still, the Vikings beat San Francisco 17-13 and Philadelphia 28-21 for a 6-0 record.
"When they get down around the 30 or 40, the Vikings get tough to move on," Hadl said. "The only difference I see is that the Vikings are better than they ever have been. The Vikigs are playing the best defense of their careers."
The Viking defense is aware of Hadl's statistics. The 12-year veteran, acquired from San Diego in the off-season, has been intercepted only two times in six Los Angeles victories, has passed for 961 yards and thrown 13 touchdown passes.

'3-point' Lamar keys Q's

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
When San Diego's Bo Lamar was playing his college ball at Southwestern Louisiana, he practiced the three-point field goal to prepare for the days when basketball would be his profession.
The practice paid off for Lamar in Friday night's game as he scored 36 points—including six three-point goals—in leading the Conquistadors to a 122-102 victory over the Utah Stars.
The rookie's performance set a team record for three-point plays.
In other ABA contests Friday night, the Kentucky Colonels trimmed the Virginia Squires 104-99; the Memphis Tams tripped Indiana Pacers 93-91; the San Antonio Spurs clipped the New York Nets 88-87, and the Carolina Cougars topped the Denver Rockets 109-104.
Lamar, meanwhile, didn't seem overly impressed with the best offensive showing of his young career. "The shots were coming to me all night," he said.
Colonels 104, Squires 99
Kentucky picked up its seventh victory in eight games, going ahead on Walt Simon's basket with 5:24 remaining, then holding on for a 104-99 triumph over the Virginia Squires.

Louie Dampier led all scorers with 21 points.
Tams 93, Pacers 91
Memphis guard Johnny Neumann hit a jump shot with just two seconds remaining—after Indiana's Darnell Hillman missed two free throws that would have won the game for the Pacers—to lift the Tams to a 93-91 triumph.
"It was just a lucky shot," said Neumann.
Spurs 88, Nets 87
San Antonio's Colby Dietrick sank two foul shots with three seconds to go and helped the Spurs to an 88-87 decision over the New York Nets.
Julius Erving's driving layup had given the Nets an 87-86 lead with 15 seconds to go before Dietrick made the winning shots from the free throw line.
Cougars 109, Rockets 104
Billy Cunningham took charge in the overtime period, scored five of his 25 points, and the Carolina Cougars upended the Denver Rockets 109-104 after battling from behind for most of the game.

Special to The Post-Crescent
NEW YORK — Farmers in Outagamie, Calumet, Winnebago and Waupaca counties increased sales during the past year pushing farm income in the area to $107,540,000, according to information contained in a survey released by Standard Rate and Data Service.
The majority of local farmers held their own last year and a number of them, especially those with well equipped, commercial-size setups, ended well ahead of the previous year.

Senate okays appointments

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Senate Friday confirmed the following appointments by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey:
Robert E. Durkin, Milwaukee and John Slaby, Phillips, to the Health and Social Services Board; Dr. Mark T. O'Meara, La Crosse, Dr. John Rupel, Marshfield, Dr. Irving Ansfield, Mequon, and Dr. Patricia McIlclie, Madison, Medical Examining Board; Dr. Henry Zastrow, Milwaukee, Chiropractic Examining Board; Thora Voren, Milwaukee, Pharmacy Examining Board.
Dr. Thomas Vaughn, Columbus, to the Dentistry Examining Board; Clair Finch, Madison, Tax Appeals Commission; Richard F. Marks, Madison, Investment Board; Gerald J. Ring, Madison, Credit Union Review Board; Kenneth Schmidt, Evansville, and Kermit Veum, Westby, Board of Agriculture.

Bingo bill ready for Lucey pen

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Legislation paving the way for legalized bingo in Wisconsin cleared the state Senate on a 19-10 vote Friday night.
The controversial measure was forwarded to Gov. Patrick Lucey for his signature after the upper house beat down 10 separate attempts to amend the proposal.
Opponents of bingo argued heatedly that, even with protections against organized gambling, bingo could be taken over by underworld interests.
"You can't eat without having dirty dishes, and you can't have bingo without having corruption," asserted Sen. Bruce Pelouquin, D-Chippewa Falls, an opponent.
Democratic Sen. Dale McKenna countered that bingo will give church groups and civic or veterans' organizations "a chance to make a little money" for their causes.
The measure would require that nonprofit organizations be licensed by the state, and that any one organization would be prohibited from holding more than 18 bingo events per year or two per month. Prizes would be limited to $250 per game, or $1,100 per bingo event.
Proponents of the bill defeated attempts to amend the bill so that the Revenue or Justice Departments would supervise the games.
The bill would create a five-member bingo control board. It would have an executive secretary who would draw between $19,000 and $25,000 per year.
The Department of Administration has estimated that legalization of bingo would provide $4.1 million for state coffers every two-year fiscal period. Of that amount, $2.5 million would come from the state sales tax on the game, $1.2 million from the two per cent tax on gross receipts and $400,000 from license fees. Each organization would have to pay a $30 license fee.
Sen. Ernest Keppler, R-Sheboygan, a longtime supporter of legalizing bingo, was unsuccessful in an attempt to provide unlimited bingo games for senior citizens' groups, those made up entirely of persons 62 years old and older.

Dr. Henry Goldberg, Milwaukee, to the Medical College of Wisconsin board of trustees; Irma West, Plover, Maynard Whitebird, Ashland, John Zancanaro, Milwaukee, and Dr. James Brandenburg, Madison, Vocational, Technical and Adult Education Board.
Donald Schaefer, Madison, to the Hearing Aid Fitters and Dealers Examining Board; Barbara Halbrook, Eau Claire, Marilyn Langdon, Racine, Michael Mervis, Milwaukee, Doris Ullrich, Wausau, and the Rev. Richard Wisniewski, La Crosse, Educational Communications Board.
Judge Gerald J. Boileau, Wausau, Annrita Lardy, Madison, James McCamy, Madison, Sister Grace McDonald, La Crosse, Naseby Rhinehart Jr., Milwaukee, and Thomas Smith of Appleton, to the Ethics Board.

Police & fire beat

Two persons suffered minor injuries in a traffic accident about 4:45 a.m. today on U. S. 41 at Outagamie County Trunk BB, two miles west of Appleton.
County police identified the drivers as Jeffrey G. Hoard, 22, 340 S. Hickory St., Fond du Lac, and Jerome M. Waypoose, 23, 453-A W. 14th St., Oshkosh.
Hoard had a swollen lip and a cut hand. Margaret Lindner, 22, 544 High Ave., Oshkosh, a passenger in the Waypoose car, suffered knee injuries.
Police said both cars were southbound on 41. The Hoard auto left the pavement, went out of control, crossed the roadway and struck the other auto and an overpass guardrail.

Rina K. Bhoshan, 18, 1738 N. Elinor St., was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital with foot and knee injuries she suffered in an accident Friday afternoon at Lynndale Drive and Service Road, two miles west of Appleton.
Outagamie County police said she was in a car driven by Kenneth Rohloff Sr., 44, 1006 W. Commercial St., which was southbound on Lynndale when it was involved in an accident with a west-bound car driven by James M. Martin, 24, 114 Columbia Ave., Chilton.

Damage was estimated at $400 after a 12-year-old Appleton boy reportedly pushed a shopping cart through a 72-by 110-inch front window pane Thursday morning at K-mart.

An Outagamie County patrolman extinguished a grass fire near the railroad crossing on College Avenue, just west of the Appleton city limits, before Town of Grand Chute firemen arrived Thursday evening.

SEYMOUR — William Springstroh, route 1, Seymour, reported the theft of a purebred Springer spaniel valued at $100 from his property Thursday afternoon.

Don't miss out on great series

BY DAVID F. WAGNER
Post-Crescent arts editor

Whenever an entertainment needs promotion, the people with vested interests approach the arts editor looking for publicity. In the case of American Film Theatre's "Eight Enchanted Evenings," promoters had a special screening Wednesday featuring excerpts from all eight films.

Normally, such promotional efforts leave me cold. Often the product isn't that great, but when it's over, somebody with 63 teeth and a diamond ring corners you, saying, "What'ya think, what'ya think?"

The AFT approach was different. It was lowkey and nobody bothered me afterwards. Despite the excerpts totalling only 70 minutes of film, the trip to Milwaukee was well-worth-while. Without exception, all eight feature fantastic acting. It might be possible, judging by what I saw and my familiarity with the plays on which the movies were based, that the "Eight Enchanted Evenings" will be the film highlight of the next year.

I especially urge those who enjoy great acting to catch the opener, "A Delicate Balance," the Edward Albee play which opens the series Monday and Tuesday at Marc 1 in Appleton and the Time in Oshkosh.

Be prepared for one hell of a performance by Katharine Hepburn, playing the mother opposite Paul Scofield ("A Man for All Seasons"), another dynamite performer.

The drama will be shown at 2 and 8 p.m. on both Monday and Tuesday. Originally, it was announced that only series tickets will be sold. Now, AFT has relented. Although it will not be announced until Sunday, I have learned that single tickets will be available in limited quantities. Because the ticket sales were computerized, it is difficult for local theater managers to know how many seats are left, but however many there are will be sold after season subscribers are seated.

As with any project as massive as this one, there are logistical bugs which could cause some inconveniences. What I hope does not happen, though, is to see such worthwhile entertainment die because of the technical foulups. An all-star cast of actors who worked for relative peanuts believe in the project and so will millions of Americans if they see the end product.

Another chance for town-city water link

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

GRAND CHUTE — Responding to the mayor's last-minute concession to accept town water district demands for exclusive expansion rights, the town's water district commission agreed to delay its decision for another month on its water source and try to negotiate a contract with the City of Appleton.

Town Chairman Ira Livingston, town legal counsel Don Herring and Eugene Mortimer, of the town's engineering firm, praised the mayor's position and interpreted it as a strong indication the city would negotiate a satisfactory contract for supplying water to the new town water district.

Just a few days ago, it appeared the townboard, acting as interim water commissioners, would be directing its engineers to dig wells to supply the water. The attorneys for the city and the town had reported they were unable to negotiate a contract because they were apart on the town's request for absolute right to expand its district and seek additional water.

Under the mayor's compromise proposal, the town would have expansion rights up to 2.4 million gallons, although that figure may be altered in final contract negotiations with the city water commission.

David Wendtland, the mayor's assistant, said he believed the mayor had based his optimism for the compromise on the recent overwhelming council vote for selling water. He said he believed the city ordinance could be amended to allow unlimited geographical expansion of the water district and then the city water commission could properly work out the contract with the town water commission.

Treatment cost of mental cases lower than was anticipated

WAUPACA — Judge A. Don Zwickey, County Court Branch 1, reported to the Waupaca County Board, this week that the boom in the number of cases and added cost he predicted in the handling of the mentally ill under the new law had turned out to be just the opposite.

"You will recall that I predicted there would be the added expense with the process which entitled a mental patient to full hearing, representation by an attorney, a preliminary hearing, a jury if requested and a trial," he said.

"What we worried about did not come true," the reviewed. "Last year we committed 50 persons who were mentally ill and this year we have committed 10. These people have been screened by the office of the District Attorney. He determines if they are mentally ill and a danger to themselves or somebody else. His office has encouraged voluntary commitment, or charged them with disorderly conduct, or some other charge. Inebriates can be committed only voluntarily."

Zwickey said that District Attorney Gerald Anderson has done a good job in handling these matters.

This year there have been no commitments from the Grand Army Home at King, he reported.

Thirteen hearings were conducted for mental patients at the Waupaca County Hospital, according to Judge Zwickey. Most of the patients were from other counties and the cost of their care is charged back to their county of legal settlement.

The second matter the judge discussed was the retirement next year of Mrs. Mildred Anderson, register in probate for Waupaca County for the past 23 years. "I have no one trained to take her place and it will take time to do this," he said. "In addition to her probate work Mrs. Anderson has checked the legal settlement of clients sent to the University Hospital and Winnebago State Hospital.

"I have been told that under the new budget law, commitments for the mentally ill will be handled by someone else," he added. "I have not been told how this is to be paid, so I assume this work will continue in our office."

He asked that an assistant be hired by Jan. 1, 1974 in order that Mrs. Anderson can properly train the person before she retires. Chairman Woodrow Smith assured the judge that the salary for this person is in the proposed 1974 budget and if passed, the job will be created.

The terms which apparently never had posed negotiations problems would be, according to the town, that a surcharge of 22 to 25 per cent be made; the contract run to 1990 and then be renegotiated, and the city extend adequate feeder pipeline to its city limits.

The town water commission was sensitive to pressures from businessmen on the College Avenue strip and the city, as well as state Department of Natural Resources, all who urged the use of city water, instead of wells.

Livingston called an executive session prior to the open water commission meeting to seek to prevent any public arguments among board members that might "jeopardize" settlement of the issue. He noted that Edward Ziegler, a board supervisor, had not been with the other supervisors and the town attorney and engineers for supper discussions prior to the meeting.

However, it was James Gasper, the third board member, who argued in favor of not delaying a decision any more and directing engineers to dig wells. The town has postponed a decision for two months while trying to work out an agreement with the city.

The commission's resolution states that if the city doesn't complete a contractual agreement with the water district by Nov. 21 — giving it two city council meetings to consider the latest offer — the engineers are directed to begin test-drillings for wells.

Livingston, noting he had seen government operate elowly before, urged Gasper to be patient. Gasper voted for the delay in hopes of a city water pact.

Herring was directed to draw up a contract to expedite the settlement, and he said he would have one by next Thursday, incorporating the mayor's and town's positions.

Gasper and Herring indicated during discussion they were unhappy about statements made recently about the water commission. Herring criticized a letter from the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce which suggested the town board had misunderstood state statutes on how to find a water source. He labeled the letter an "insult to the integrity of the town board of the Town of Grand Chute."

Gasper complained the city attorney had wrongly suggested the town wasn't negotiating "in good faith."

However, Herring repeatedly praised Mayor James Sutherland for his sincere effort to bring about a satisfactory settlement. He called the mayor's approach reasonable.

Ziegler reiterated his position that he would go along with city water, if the town had the right to expand the district. He noted there are requests for service outside the present district boundaries already, and the district is nearly two years away from operation startup.

Fishing license cost debate resolved

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A compromise that resort area interests have been seeking since July was completed Friday when the Senate voted in 15-day and four-day non-resident fishing licenses for individuals and annual licenses for families.

The Senate, by a 29-1 vote, sent to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey a measure that will tone down the controversial fishing license debate that was generated in July when the 1973-75 state budget authorized the doubling of all non-resident fishing license fees.

Lucey has stated that he would accept a compromise bill that established short-time licenses rather than rolling back license fees. If Lucey signs the bill, it would become effective Jan. 1.

The 15 day license will cost $7 and the four-day $5. The annual family license will be $17.50, replacing the $15 husband-wife combination. The residents sportsman's fee will be reduced from $16 to $15.

The doubling of non-resident fishing license fees sent the individual annual license to $12 and had resort owners claiming that the recreation business would suffer drastically.

Sen. Reuben LaFave, R-Oconto, said the compromise bill would be a boon to the recreation industry.

"Vacationers will still come to Wisconsin because of the temporary license," LaFave said. "The short-term license will draw the long-term license. It will be good public relations and will smooth the waters that were stirred up by the action in the budget."

New London man gets six months in morals case

WAUPACA — Robert G. Procknow, 23, route 3, New London, was sentenced to six months in the county jail after a presentence investigation on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Judge A. Don Zwickey, County Court Branch 1, withheld the sentence and placed the defendant on one year's probation to the state Department of Health and Social Services.

The condition of probation, stipulated by the court, is that the defendant be treated as an outpatient, if possible at the Wolf River Mental Health Clinic. If the defendant cannot be evaluated as an outpatient, Zwickey provided that Probation Officer Joe Eich make the decision for inpatient treatment for Procknow.

Procknow was originally charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, attempted crime against sexual morality and attempted indecent liberties, when he appeared Aug. 30 before Judge Nathan Wiese, County Court Branch 2.

Charges were filed after an Aug. 17 incident in Manawa, when the defendant allegedly tried to entice two 11-year-old girls.

The attempted crime against sexual morality and attempted indecent liberties charges were dismissed in plea bargaining between the district attorney's office and the defendant's court appointed counsel, Stephen Hansen.

Assembly overturns 3 vetos

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Assembly voted late Friday to override three of 39 vetoes made by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey to the new state budget.

The lower house immediately messaged the vetoes to the Senate, where they must receive a two-thirds vote to overrule the governor.

Overridden were vetoes in sections of the budget applying to a user fee study by the University of Wisconsin, appropriations for special and executive committees, and legislative approval of new federally funded jobs in state agencies.

The version of the state budget passed by the legislature would have required the Joint Finance Committee and the governor to approve federally funded jobs created by state agencies above the number of positions authorized in the spending plan.

Lucey struck out the need for the approval, saying such a procedure would be unwieldy. The lower house voted 76-23 to restore the provision.

It voted 67-32 to restore a request that the UW submit to the legislature a study on whether user fees could be levied against faculty and staff members next year. The fees would earn $1 million in funds now supplied by the state for support of non-instructional activities.

Lucey's veto had changed the requirement so the study would include the possibility of levying user fees against students.

On a 67-31 vote, the Assembly said special and executive committees should be funded with a "sum certain" appropriation of $200,000. Lucey had vetoed the provision to provide a blank check for the committees.

Among vetoes upheld by the Assembly and therefore no longer subject to legislative change were ones which: Require public disclosure of financial interests by public officials; eliminate a proposal for 50 per cent state support of local tax assessor programs, and strike a legislative attempt to freeze five per cent of the UW allocations next year until the university proposes a consolidation of its programs.

Sen. Nelson urges limits on pollution law

WASHINGTON — Public hearings should be conducted to determine limits on Environmental Protection Agency enforcement of farm waste runoff regulations, said Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., in a letter to Russell Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Nelson said Congress did not intend that the small farmer be forced to comply with antipollution regulations governing waste runoff from livestock and poultry operations.

Nelson said many Wisconsin farmers believe new national pollution discharge elimination permits and effluent limitations will force them to treat animal wastes.

Concentrated animal feeding operations are listed among "point sources," of waste that would be required to obtain permits but the determination of the size of a "concentrated animal feeding operation," is decided by the Environmental Protection Agency, said Nelson.

Because the agency differs with the agriculture department and with Congressional debates on the definition hearings are necessary, said Nelson.

Island annexations get final approval

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Measures which would permit the licensing of physician assistants and allow cities to annex town islands were given final legislative approval Friday in the Wisconsin Assembly.

But the lower house refused to agree with the Senate version of an inland rehabilitation bill, and a conference committee was set up to work out minor differences on that proposal.

The physician assistants bill, sent to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, would allow the licensing of qualified people to assist in medical care.

The bill would authorize formation of a physicians assistants undergraduate program at the University of Wisconsin, and set aside about $350,000 to conduct it. The UW Board of Regents would have to submit a proposed curriculum to the legislature in January.

The measure would prohibit the use of

DNR approves boat channels on Winneconne

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Construction of two boat channels and a boat harbor off Lake Winneconne in the Town of Winneconne, Winnebago County, requested by Russell Grignon, has been authorized in a permit issued by the state Department of Natural Resources.

The channels will be about 1,500 feet long and will connect at the south end with a harbor with a diameter of 500 feet, the agency said.

Don't relax yet on bridge work; Memorial next

Motorists who breathed a sigh of relief on word that the Oneida Street Bridge was opening for traffic might start coughing again when they hear that, starting Monday, traffic will be slowed across the Memorial Drive span.

Lanes will be narrowed as the John Hennes Trucking Co. begins replacement of noisy expansion joints on the bridge, a job expected to take three or four weeks.

Traffic will be allowed across in both directions, but it will be restricted to 11-foot lanes and "very slow speeds," said City Engineer Thomas Harp.

Harp recommended that drivers use other bridges to avoid the slowdown.

The work, a $17,350 project paid for by the city, will replace the old steel expansion joints separating concrete sections of the bridge roadway that have for some time been breaking loose and causing noise problems as vehicles pass over them.

Until now, the city has periodically had to reweld the steel strips as a temporary measure to stop the clanking that has disturbed nearby residents.

In addition to the Memorial Drive project, work will also continue next week on:

— Watermain installation along Fremont Street, between Jackson Street and Telulah Avenue. Cleanup work is about all that remains.

— Grading of Meade Street. Graveling of the roadway will take place as soon as the grading is completed.

— Concrete paving on several streets. Linseed oiling is required on paving done since Oct. 1.

— Oneida Street reconstruction. Although the roadway is open, some dress up work behind the sidewalks will have to be done next week.

physicians assistants in certain licensed professions such as podiatry, dentistry and chiropractic.

Proponents of the bill argued the assistants are needed to help solve shortages in health care personnel.

The town islands bill would allow municipalities to unilaterally annex township land of 65 acres or less which is surround by municipal territory.

Final approval of the physicians assistants and town island bills came when the Assembly adopted conference committee reports which worked out differences of opinion between the two houses.

The lakes bill would allow land owners to establish special districts for rehabilitating inland lakes, and would allow the levying of a tax among the landowners if 51 per cent of them vote in favor of the move.

The tax would be used by the districts to fund at least 10 per cent of its rehabilitation projects, while as much as 90 per cent funding coming from the state.

Reps. Lewis Mittness, DJanesville; William Rogers, DKAukauna, and John Shabaz R-New Berlin, were appointed by the Assembly to serve on the conference committee. Sens. Walter Chilsen, R-Wausau; Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, and Dale McKenna, DJefferson, were named by the Senate.

New London boosts UF chairmen by six

NEW LONDON — Six additional area chairmen have been chosen for this year's United Fund campaign, according to Mrs. James Sodoiski, the general chairman.

The new workers are Mrs. Steve Viscocky, Mrs. Walter Heise, Mrs. Peter Snyder, Mrs. Richard Wolfrath, Mrs. Robert McCoy and Mrs. William Caskey.

This year's goal is $17,500.

Pay hassle delays health director okay

Outagamie County officials will continue to negotiate salary with the nominee for the post of unified health services program director who probably will be the county's highest paid employee.

The unified services board unanimously approved its personnel committee's choice for director Thursday night, after interviewing him, then gave the committee and County Executive Alvin E. Woehler authority to negotiate.

There reportedly is about a $1,500 difference between the candidate's request and the county's offer.

John Wylie, unified board chairman, was disappointed over failure to hire the director Thursday. The board did not set a maximum salary, but indications were the candidate is asking about $23,000.

"He would be the highest paid employee in the county," Wylie told the 15-member board, but "....he stands head and shoulders above any other applicant." The man would be taking a substantial pay cut even if his salary demand is met, Wylie explained.

"Our offer on salary is not very palatable to him," said Russell DeLaHunt, chairman of the county board.

Wylie said there were 15 applicants, some of them local persons, for the county's top health job under a recently revamped service delivery system. The personnel committee interviewed four of the applicants.

Four key areas of competence figured in considering applicants, Wylie explained. They were clinical experience in areas of service over which the board has jurisdiction, administrative background, ability to deal with people and professional understanding of legislation involving the new, unified community approach to dealing with mental health and related areas that had been largely under state control.

"He combines all these factors in one," Wylie said of the nominee. "He's the man for the job."

The nominee, during a 20-minute meeting with the board, explained that "budgeting and planning are two of my fortes."

He added, "I'm not afraid to fire people. I expect people to set up goals and objectives then achieve them. If they can't, they're not qualified."

He said he is obligated to give his present employer a 30-day termination notice.

Sylvester Elser said the man would have to be hired under contract because the proposed salary does not fit into the county's organizational chart.

John Marzion believed that whether the director would be the highest paid county employee should have no bearing on the negotiations.

The candidate met with the board's three-member personnel committee after the regular meeting Thursday.

Man hurt, foul play ruled out

An 87-year-old Appleton man found in his blood-smeared kitchen this morning apparently was not the victim of foul play, according to police.

Herman H. Meinberg, 938 E. El-dorado St., was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital about 9:45 a.m. after neighbors found him seated on a chair in the kitchen.

Det. Sgt. Ronald Soper said it appeared Meinberg had a large bruise and a cut to his face. He was covered with blood.

Meinberg was conscious, but police were not immediately able to question him in detail.

An open jackknife was found on the living room floor, but police do not believe it was connected with Meinberg's injuries. His wallet was on a bed, the money intact. There was no evidence of forced entry. Meinberg lives alone.

Soper said that a preliminary investigation revealed that Meinberg, who has medical problems, apparently became confused and ransacked the kitchen early today. Kitchen walls and appliances were covered with blood and items including a radio and potted plants were smashed on the floor. Cushions on a living room sofa also were overturned.

Soper said a further investigation is being made.

Assembly puts 'Armistice Day' back to Nov. 11

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Its lobby filled with veterans, the Wisconsin Assembly gave final legislative approval Friday to a bill which would change the observance of Veterans Day from the fourth Monday in October back to Nov. 11.

The bill would also rename the holiday "Armistice Day."

The vote was 98-1, with Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Shorewood, casting the only negative vote.

Veterans Day was one of several holidays established first by the federal government and then by the state as "Monday holidays" to create three-day weekends.

Veterans and their supporters in the legislature argued that Armistice Day is an historic holiday which should be celebrated on the anniversary of the end of World War I.

Death 'destroyed' Armstrong

By ARTHUR L. SRB
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Karleton Armstrong testified Friday that extensive precautions were taken to avoid injuries in a 1970 antiwar bombing and that he went into shock when he learned a researcher was killed in the explosion.

"That really destroyed me because in my own mind I didn't think there was any way that death could be justified," Armstrong said in Dane County Circuit Court at his presentence hearing.

Armstrong, 27, who has pleaded guilty to arson and second degree murder in the death of researcher Robert Fassnacht, said his co-conspirators had kept the Army Mathematics Research Center under surveillance in an effort to blow it up when there was the least danger of causing death or injuries.

Armstrong's mother was the final witness to take the stand in the two-week long presentence hearing. Sentence is to be pronounced next Thursday.

Mrs. Armstrong said the bombing and other antiwar violence could have been avoided if society had been more aware of the Vietnam war and spoken more forcefully against it.

"There never would have been a bombing if people my age had done something instead of letting our children do it," she said.

The bombing was the last major antiwar violence on the University of Wisconsin campus.

"The building was placed under surveillance for a period of two weeks," Armstrong said, explaining that logs were kept of times in which the center was generally unoccupied and pedestrian and auto traffic was lightest on nearby University Avenue.

Armstrong said he drove a stolen pickup truck loaded with a ton of explosives to a position near Sterling Hall, which housed the center, and lit a 40 foot fuse which he figured would give him and his co-conspirators about 6½ minutes in which to telephone police and flee the scene.

The bomb went off in about three minutes as he and his colleagues were driving away.

"That was really a weird sensation," he said. "What was my feeling then? I was just praying. I didn't know what to think."

First radio reports indicated there were no deaths or injuries, Armstrong said. "I felt I had a new lease on life."

When he heard that someone had been killed, he said, "that really destroyed me... I couldn't explain why Army Math was even destroyed. I was in shock."

But Armstrong had testified earlier that he felt that the center, a frequent antiwar target, must be eliminated because it represented "an insult to every American—to every student on campus who had protested its presence."

"To leave just one brick unshattered would have meant its presence was still there," he said.

Armstrong said he believed that if the bombing saved "just one Indochinese... to me it would have been worth it. Property doesn't mean anything compared to life. If you aren't alive, what's the value of property?"

Armstrong said that as the war in Vietnam increased in intensity, he detected similarities between America and Nazi Germany.

"I would be prepared to give up my life so that wouldn't happen in America," Armstrong said.

Armstrong said he also began to lose his childhood worship of science and scientists.

"I was very disillusioned about how science was being used by the government," he said. "It was being used to oppress people."

The presentence hearing before Judge William Sachtjen was held to determine if there were any mitigating circumstances which might lead to a sentence of less than the 25 years sought by the prosecution.

Armstrong, who wore a red turtleneck sweater and brown trousers, admitted he was nervous as he approached the witness stand.

"I don't know how I found the strength to get up here," he told Sachtjen in a barely audible voice.

Sachtjen reminded Armstrong he would have 90 days in which to appeal any sentence to the state Supreme Court.

"If I don't make it here, I'm never going to make it," Armstrong replied.

Before Armstrong took the stand, his father, Donald, 57, testified he may have influenced his son's antiwar behavior because of his own objections to the Vietnam War.

Party 'reform' sought by Dane GOP unit

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Chairman David Sullivan of the state Republican committee was asked today by the Dane County Republican executive committee to include a series of party "reform" propositions on the agenda for the special Republican state convention that Sullivan wants to hold in January.

James Haney, a young lawyer who is chairman of the party apparatus in the state's second county, which includes the capital city of Madison, said the demand was prompted by the strong conviction that "state and local Republicans must take the initiative to restore public confidence in the political process by putting our own house in order."

"We simply must will not be a competitive unit in Wisconsin if we retreat to blind allegiance to the status quo and continue the strategem of 'business as usual' he asserted in a letter to the state party leader made public here.

A spokesman for the Dane County unit said "finance reform" consideration should include an objective study of the Adamany report to Gov. Patrick Lucey that already has been denounced by some prominent Republicans because one of its major proposals is the use of public tax funds to permit candidates to reduce their dependence on special interest contributions from private persons and associations.

Haney's letter to Sullivan said that "the spotlight of public opinion has focused painfully on shortcomings in the national Republican administration. Only aggressive display of Republican open-mindedness and innovation will show the electorate that we recognize our failings and have set out to correct them."

The new Dane county party chairman, with a group of like-minded younger persons, took over control of the unit two years ago. Among them is Reed Coleman, for a brief period state party chairman and son of the late Thomas E. Coleman, one of the most effective of the state party chiefs in a previous generation of party prosperity.

W.C. Marten dies Friday while hunting

DALE — A 55-year-old New London man, listed as missing for several hours Friday, was found dead in a wooded area of the Walter Neubauer farm off Outagamie County Trunk D, six miles south of New London about 6 p.m. Friday.

According to Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, Wilmer C. Marten, 210 W. Quincy St., New London, died of an acute heart attack.

Kemps said Marten had gone hunting with a companion, August L. Otto, 58, also of New London, and that the two entered the woods about 9 a.m. They had planned to split up and meet later at a designated location, but when Martin failed to show up, Otto started looking for him.

Kemps estimated that Marten may have been dead seven hours before his body was found by Otto and Neubauer.

The victim was formerly employed as a crane operator for Giddings & Lewis in Kaukauna, and the body was released to the Cline & Hanson Funeral Home in New London.

Haney proposed that the January convention be in Madison — Sullivan has not yet indicated his preference for a site — and that its agenda in addition to the disputed issue of party endorsement of candidates for state-wide office nominations it should cover:

1. — The direct election of state party officers by convention delegates. They are now chosen by the state committee members, who in turn are the elected chairmen of district caucuses.
2. — Representation of special mittee. "Special interests," it was explained would include youth, women and other categories.
3. — Delegate selection procedures for state and district conventions. There have been conflicts about selection of convention delegates in Dane county in recent times.
4. — Convention rules and procedures and campaign finance reform.

Insurance legislators elect Lorge president

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, was elected president of the National Conference of Insurance Legislators (COIL) at its annual convention in Atlanta this week.

Lorge, chairman of the Senate Committee on Judiciary and Insurance, was first vice-president of the organization last year. The group includes legislators from all 50 states and has been active for five years.

Outagamie board shuffle proposed

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer
One of the most major structural reorganizations in county history will be submitted to the Outagamie County Board for consideration before next April, with a portion of the changes to be presented next month.

The most drastic proposal will be creation of a public works department centered around the highway department with the highway committee being appointed by the county board chairman, the same as all other standing committees.

The special rules subcommittee this morning directed Corp. Counsel William Schuh to start preparing the necessary ordinances that would change the board's operating structure.

Along with those changes, the committee recommended that the county board chairman and vice chairman be put on salary and that the remainder of the board stay on per diem with that pay being increased.

The recommended salaries are $4,500 for the board chairman, $2,500 for the vice chairman and $32 per diem for a full day meeting and $18 for a half-day meeting.

The ordinance pertaining to the salaries and per diem plus another ordinance stating the county's intent to operate under the recently passed administrative home rule law will probably be presented in November.

Schuh told the committee that the county must express its intent to use the home rule law before it can use any of its provisions' including the splitting off of the board chairman and vice chairman from the rest of the county board for pay purposes.

County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt urged that all county board rules, except those relating only to procedural matters, be put in ordinance form. "As it is now," DeLaHunt said, "the rules look like pretzels by the end of the year."

The proposal adopted by the committee would place the rules governing committee structure and duties, contracts and the purchasing or selling of county property into ordinance form.

Schuh told the committee that the home rule law has not been "finally interpreted," but that he felt the county board could do what the committee intended under its provisions.

However, he said the ordinance "must make sure there is no question of whether the highway committee is operating under the ordinance or under Chapter 83" (highway section of the state statutes). The same would hold true, he said, for the board of social services.

"There probably always will be some question as to what takes precedent," Schuh said.

The salary and per diem recommendations were based on providing approximately a 35 per cent increase over what is now being paid to supervisors.

The board chairman now receives a salary of $2,000 a year, and collects a maximum of $1,320 a year in per diem. The vice chairman now receives only per diem for meetings that he attends. Supervisors receive $22 for a full day meeting and $15 for a half-day meeting.

Supv. Richard Jahnke said that in 1963 the per diem was $18. An annual increase of 6 per cent would bring the per diem up to about $32, he said.

Jahnke, who does not plan to seek re-election next April, said he felt the proposed salaries were still too low. He suggested a salary of $5,500 for the chairman, $3,000 for the vice chairman and per diem of $45 for full day meetings and $24 for half-days.

Supv. Marvin Babbitt, who proposed the scale that will be recommended, said Jahnke's proposal would not have any chance of passage.

Any salary increases acted upon by the board would not go into effect until April.

Tallest Silo

This is Outagamie County's tallest silo. It's a part of the John Baum farm, route 3, Appleton. It was built only recently, and measures a hefty 20 by 100. As if that weren't enough, it stands next to another silo built last year which measures a very respectable 20 by 70.

State Patrol powers widened

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — State Patrol officers would be given expanded arrest powers in a bill given final legislative approval Friday night by the Wisconsin Assembly.

The lower house concurred on a voice vote to a Senate version of the proposal which was approved earlier in the night.

The bill, which has had strong support from patrol officials and some opposition from local law enforcement officers, allows patrolmen to make arrests within 24 hours of a crime or if they believe a warrant has been issued.

The Assembly agreed with a Senate change which requires that patrolmen be on duty and in uniform when they make such arrests.

Patrolmen are now generally just restricted to traffic offenses.

Local law enforcement officials said they feared the bill might open the door to a state police force which would eventually undermine their power.

In other action, the lower house also gave final approval to a bill which paves the way for federal takeover Jan. 1 of programs to aid the aged, blind and disabled.

The measure, mentioned by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey this week as a "must" measure, would authorize the expenditure of about $19 million in state money to keep the aid payments at their present level by subsidizing federal funding. The federal government has promised additional funds to states which provide such supplements.

But the measure was passed without a provision which would have allowed distribution of contraceptives to welfare recipients regardless of their age and marital status. Federal officials have warned that lack of such a provision could cost Wisconsin some Aid to Families with Dependent Children funds.

Parent-teacher conference slated at Manawa schools

MANAWA — Parent-teacher conferences have been scheduled from 1 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday in all the Little Wolf public schools.

Parents may pick up the report cards in the office before conferences. There will be no school on conference day and it will be dismissed at 2 p.m. Wednesday to allow faculty members to go to Milwaukee for the Wisconsin Education Association Convention. School will resume Nov. 5.

Senate okays DNR board seat for Fox

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The appointment of Thomas Fox to the Department of Natural Resources Board survived strong opposition by northern state senators Friday and cleared the Wisconsin Senate 20-11.

Though none of the senators speaking against the appointment questioned Fox's credentials, they were critical of his short-term residence in northern Wisconsin. He has lived in Washburn for one year, and was born in Chilton.

Fox unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for secretary of state in 1970. He then served for one year as clerk of the Democratic-controlled state Assembly before he moved to Washburn.

One of the strongest critics, Sen. Daniel Theno, R-Ashland, represents the district into which Fox moved.

Majority Leader Raymond Johnson, R-Eleva, contended the law setting up appointments to the DNR board was designed to assure that "people with knowledge of the area gained over a long period of time" would be selected.

"What we are seeing here is a device to get around that statute," he said.

Sen. Carl Thompson, D-Stoughton, said that since Fox's birthplace was in northern Wisconsin he has some knowledge of the area.

Sen. Gordon Roseleip, R-Darlington, criticized opponents of the appointment for trying to block it on basis of residency.

"We should judge people on their honesty and sincerity," he said. "Even though he just moved up there he's still a resident of the north."

Opponents contended that Gov. Patrick J. Lucey could have appointed a "grass-roots Democrat" from northern Wisconsin.

Democratic Minority Leader Fred Risser of Madison pointed out that four county board chairmen from northern Wisconsin appeared on Fox's behalf at hearings on the appointment.

Localities take stand on state issues

MADISON — Wisconsin city and village officials Friday elected a Fox Cities village president as the second ranking officer of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, and adopted formal positions on highway aid reform, municipal labor laws, personal property tax relief and state-imposed limits on local taxes.

The League, winding up its 75th annual conference here, chose Combined Locks Village President Marvin H. Schumacher as first vice president. The holder of the office traditionally is elevated to president the following year.

The League this year elected Wausau Mayor John Kannenberg president. He was first vice president last year. Wisconsin Rapids Mayor Donald F. Penza was chosen second vice president.

Resolutions were adopted with only one minor change from the wording previously published in the League magazine, "The Municipality."

They include measures which:

- Urge the legislature "to enact a completely new highway aid formula based on such factors as local traffic volumes, registrations, highway use, motor vehicle accidents, past highway expenditures per capita and property tax levy for highway purposes."
- Protest the local property tax levy limit imposed on municipalities by the legislature, under Lucey Administration urging, in the state budget bill. The levy limit is described as an "unwarranted intrusion into matters of local concern" which under Wisconsin's home-rule tradition should be left to locally elected officials.
- Demand legislation to protect private homeowners and other property owners from higher property taxes in the future to make up for state elimination of the personal property tax for businessmen, manufacturers and farmers in the new budget bill. The resolution declares that the state action lacked adequate safeguards against loss of revenue by local governments due to the phasing-out of the personal property tax.
- Urges the legislature "to resist all further attempts by public employees to obtain added beneficial provisions such as right to strike, compulsory binding arbitration and mandatory agency shop."

Legislation adopted the past few years contains "almost every feature favoring employees that union leaders in this or any other state have sought," the resolution declares.

The highway aids resolution was submitted by the city of Milwaukee. It claims the present formula "favors the state and town governments at the expense of cities and villages." The measure opposes any formula based primarily on miles of roads subject to aid in a community.

The present formula, which is based on mileage, distributes funds at a rate of $17 per person in towns but only $10 per person in villages and $9 in cities, according to the resolution. State figures show 109 communities received aids of more than $100 per vehicle registered in the community in 1970, and 60 communities received aids that year exceeding $100 per person, it adds.

The Lucey Administration is preparing a transportation program for consideration by the Legislature in January including revision of the highway aid distribution formula.

Prison wives picket for conjugal visits

WAUPUN, Wis. (AP) — The allowing of conjugal visits between inmates and their wives was urged Friday in a letter left by a group of nine women who picketed the State Prison.

The letter said that, when some of the women proposed such visits, the armless chairs in the visiting room were replaced with armed chairs and prisoners could not sit with their arms around visitors.

The document was directed to Warden Ramon Gray. He was in Madison, however, and it was accepted by Harvey Winans, associate warden of security. He refused to meet with the women as a group, but said he would meet with one or two of them at a time. But the women picketed the institution instead until police told them they could not do so without a permit.

Gray said there always had been a rule against putting arms around visitors. He said the staff had been lenient about enforcing it until two or three weeks ago when he said excessive hugging and kissing was "getting pretty bad."

He said that the prison formerly had a long table with an eight inch board down the middle separating the visitors and the prisoners.

If there were conjugal visits, he said, "What would you do with the single prisoners, bring in prostitutes?"

Linda Hoelzer, whose fiancé is an inmate at the institution, said the issues which prompted the letter included refusal of the warden and his staff to negotiate complaints with a group of prisoners and their friends and relatives. She said there was harassment of persons who worked to improve visiting conditions.

Judge will pay fine, despite 'illegal' ticket

Only after he received a parking ticket Thursday did Circuit Judge Gordon Myse learn that Appleton had taken no action on a recommendation he made early in July to change its procedures for issuing parking tickets.

Myse, who made the recommendation in a court case challenging the constitutionality of the ticketing procedure, said today that he would pay the $1 fine rather than take his case to court.

Police Chief Earl O. Wolff confirmed that the city had not changed the procedure because "we haven't heard from the city attorney, and we haven't received instructions on what to change."

City Atty. David Geenen, attending a conference in Madison, was unavailable for comment, although Ald. Walter Kalata, a member of the City Council's welfare and ordinance committee, which would act on such a measure, said that nothing relating to the issue had come before the committee since Myse handed down his decision.

Ruling on a case brought by Appleton attorney Paul Horvath, Myse recommended that the city adopt a form for nonmoving violations that would give a person adequate notice as to how he could go about contesting his ticket.

It was Myse's opinion that Horvath had not been properly advised as to what procedures he could use, including the court in which he could be heard and the date of such a hearing, in case he wanted to contest his parking ticket.

Horvath had received a $5 ticket for parking in a no-parking zone on Jan. 23, and on March 23 he received a mailed summons notifying him that the original $5 forfeiture had increased to $10. He was warned that failure to pay by April 2 would result in a warrant being issued for his arrest.

Myse ruled that the failure of the city to properly advise Horvath of his rights to contest violated Horvath's constitutional rights. Since the city failed to give adequate warning, he wrote, the city was not then empowered to issue a warrant for Horvath's arrest.

As for Horvath, he has to date not paid his fine, although he said that Geenen agreed to have the amount lowered to the original $5, and that he would pay this amount in the near future.

Douglas will be justice longest on high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice William O. Douglas reaches a personal and public milestone Monday when he becomes the man to have served longest on the Supreme Court.

Douglas will have served 34 years, 196 days, exceeding by a day the tenure of Justice Stephen Field who retired Dec. 1, 1897.

The 75-year-old Douglas will not make an appearance on the bench to mark the date. The court is in a brief recess.

An examination of Douglas' life and career is planned for Saturday in Washington with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, former Chief Justice Earl Warren, and former Justices Arthur Goldberg, Thomas C. Clark, and Abe Fortas among the speakers.

It is a career marked by controversy both private and public for Douglas, anchor of the shrunken liberal wing of the court. In recent months, signs of internal controversy at the court have centered on Douglas as well.

In August, a bitter dissent by Douglas accused his fellow justices of violating the law and the procedures of the court in order to overrule his effort to halt the U.S. bombing of Cambodia.

He did not grant that the behavior he complained of was inadvertent, only that it "may have been" inadvertent.

Douglas has carried on a steady, if often indirect disagreement with Burger over the court's workload. Burger has maintained that it must be reduced if the court is to function.

The prolific Douglas has taken the opposite stance, saying the court is, if anything, underworked.

When the current court term opened earlier this month, Douglas in one day told the court it should agree to hear more than 130 cases beyond the nearly 80 it had then selected. It was a number nearly equal to a full term's calendar.

Some court insiders speculated that Douglas would be more restrained if he thought he would pick up the three additional votes needed to set a case for full review.

More recently, Douglas dramatically questioned the confidentiality of the weekly conferences held by the justices at which votes are taken on cases argued and new cases selected.

The seriousness with which the need for confidentiality is treated at these meetings has made them among the most leak-proof in Washington.

But Douglas, dissenting in a wiretaprelated case, declared himself "morally certain" that the conferences have been bugged. He declined to elaborate.

Soon after, the court information office issued a brief statement attributed to the court's chief security officer. The statement denied that there had been any breach of security.

But these internal episodes appear mild to the storms that have raged around the judicial activist since he was appointed to the court at age 40 by Franklin Delano Roosevelt after serving as head of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Douglas, a Western-bred individualist who came east to seek his education and fortune, has been a staunch defender of First Amendment freedoms, the rights of the accused, and of the need for conservation and protection of the environment.

And he has declared that "federal judges are entitled, like other people, to the full freedom of the First Amendment."

Douglas has exercised those freedoms extensively, a fact that figured prominently in a 1970 impeachment attempt pushed by, among others, Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich., the man President Nixon has nominated for vice president.

Douglas' book, "Points of Rebellion," was published in that year and excerpted in an issue of Evergreen Magazine which also contained pictures of nude women. The book said the country was in the grip of an unresponsive militaristic government.

The impeachment attempt sputtered out but it was far from the last criticism Douglas received from Congress.

Even Douglas' four marriages, two of them to women not half his age, have prompted some congressional condemnation.

Douglas married his current wife, Kathleen, in 1966. They had met a year earlier at a cocktail bar where she worked as a waitress. Mrs. Douglas recently completed law school and was admitted to practice in the District of Columbia.

Nixon hard-working, not fun-loving

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's lifestyle in the White House has brought him criticism and misunderstandings.

His isolation and his constant travels from one presidential home to another across the country have added to his image problems.

A continuing feud with the nation's news media hasn't helped him, either.

But basically, President Nixon is a conservative, shy man, ill-at-ease in social situations. He is a man who never works in shirtsleeves — even in private.

Despite his four presidential homes on which the government has lavished millions of dollars, Nixon is hardly what anyone would call fun-loving. He works long hours, has unending stacks of required reading, and has never acknowledged taking a real vacation in 4½ years.

He has a few close personal friends or advisers and the inner circle has been drastically diminished by the Watergate scandals. Now, even his closest friend, Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo, has come under attack for his Florida banking and financial dealings.

The Nixons rarely entertain outside of their formal official White House functions and the President has only danced publicly twice in his years at the White House.

Few guests are ever even invited to come for informal family dinners.

Though World War II Navy buddies recall how Nixon once bluffed to win a $1,500 poker hand, he has never been known to relax at a card game in the White House.

The President is not a man who enjoys gourmet food, either. In fact, he maintains a constant low-fat diet.

During the recent Middle East crisis, Julie Eisenhower talked about her father, describing him as "very disciplined." She said he always starts his day running in place for two minutes for exercise.

Nixon is usually in his office by 8 or 8:30 a.m. and generally works there until about 6 or 6:30 p.m. He likes to start out in the formal Oval Office of the White House, then move to a special working office he set up in the next-door Executive Office Building.

Late at night, Nixon likes to work in the small hideaway Lincoln Study tucked away in the southeast corner of the family quarters, where he keeps a closet filled with stereo equipment and recordings.

Four times during the week of crisis over the Watergate tapes and the Middle East, Nixon flew off to his favorite decision-making spot, the presidential mountaintop retreat in Camp David.

He likes to work before a blazing fireplace — even during summer weather, when he orders the air-conditioning turned up high to offset the fireplace heat.

"He always runs up steps," Julie reports, and keeps up his health by eating "high-energy foods," like cottage cheese and wheat germ.

Nixon is a formal man who wears conservative suits, blue preferred, rarely wears a hat, and disturbs some of his aides by refusing to work in shirtsleeves — even at his beachfront

Subway work begun

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) — This wealthy and elegant capital of the industrious North Rhine's Westphalia State is the latest West German city to start construction of a subway system.

The first stretch of 14.5 kilometers, to reach from Duesseldorf's central railroad station to nearby Duisburg, is to cost one billion marks or $345 million.

vacation homes.

Aides have gone to some lengths to prevent any candid informal photographing of the President, and they have, for example, barred anyone from getting a photo of him in a bathing suit.

It is no secret that Nixon takes a drink now and then. He even displayed his martinimaking ability to reporters, whom he invited into his office one New Year's Eve.

On a recent night out at Trader Vic's near the White House, restaurant employees reported that the President sipped three mai tai's, an exotic rum drink.

Nixon, now 60, has enjoyed phenomenal good health — until he was stricken with viral pneumonia last July. But he even got over that sooner than his doctors expected.

He boasts of never having a common cold or a headache, a fact that even amazes his family.

However, Nixon claims he suffers from hay fever, a notion disputed by his White House physician, who says he has decided to let the President have his way in this medical dispute.

Swimming and walking are the President's main exercises, in addition to his morning run-in-place ritual. During the crisis preceding Spiro T. Agnew's resignation as vice president, observers at Key Biscayne, Fla., reported seeing Nixon "walking, walking, walking" on the beach near his bayfront home.

His fondest recreation as President has been riding along California and Florida freeways, sometimes for two hours or more. Unlike former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who used to enjoy driving himself, Nixon never drives. He leaves it to his Secret Service agents or to his friend, Rebozo.

He is fond of escaping from the White House for an evening dinner cruise on the Potomac River aboard the 102-foot Navy yacht Sequoia. He rarely invites outside guests. Members of the family, Rebozo or top aides usually go along.

He takes frequent excursions with Rebozo aboard his houseboat, Coco Lobo III, in Florida waters and aboard millionaire Robert H. Applanalp's sports fishing boat Sea Lion II off the Bahamas.

Nixon is not much of a fisherman, but he goes for the boat ride.

Well-known as a sports fan, Nixon is mostly a spectator. He often recalls how he was benched on the Whittier College football team.

As President, Nixon has preferred to watch football or baseball games on color television rather than attend.

But he likes to pick up the telephone after a football game and talk over the play with the coach.

Julie Eisenhower says her father "knows that for his own health he has to relax a little bit, so he'll set aside time for dinner and doing something relaxing, like taking in a movie."

The Nixons frequently observe Saturday night at the movies with a White House projectionist on hand with a ready supply of films when they are in Florida, California or Camp David.

The Nixons prefer G-rated movies and one of the President's favorites, ordered for repeat showings, was "Patton," the story of the famous World War II tank general.

Nixon also likes to listen to music, mostly classical and show tunes, in his hideaway Lincoln Study at night. Mrs. Nixon reported not long ago that he had also taken to occasionally playing the piano in the family quarters at midnight and that he likes to play his stereo set blasting loudly.

As a family man, Julie says the President "always makes us feel we're an important part" of what's going on. She says her father has made telephone calls to alert his wife and daughters "don't read the papers tomorrow because it's going to be bad." He doesn't want the family to worry about it, Julie explains, and reassures them by saying: "I know what I'm doing, and I'm doing the right thing."

Death topic of six-part workshop at UWO

OSHKOSH — "Consider Death. . .," a six-part series on the meaning of and the family involvement in that portion of life, will be offered Oct. 30-Dec. 4 by the University of Wisconsin's College of Continuing Education, in cooperation with Campus Ministry.

The sessions will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays in the Pollock Alumni House on the UWO campus. However, the Nov. 13 session will be at the Seefeld Funeral Chapel, 300 Eagle St.

The Oct. 30 session is entitled "Cultural Shades of Death," dealing with the different meanings of it in this and other societies in the world. The Rev. James Riddell of the UWO anthropology department will compare the rituals and ideas surrounding death in non-western societies.

"Dying in America" is the theme Nov. 6, which will focus on approaches to death most prevalent in this culture and serve as the basis for discussion concerning our fears about it.

"The Rites of Death" will be examined Nov. 13 by Kenneth Seefeld of the Seefeld Funeral Home and the Rev. James Vahey, Wesley United Methodist Church. They will discuss the manner in which the feelings about death are reflected in contemporary funeral practices and question whether changing the practices can help achieve a more mature view of life and death.

"And When I Die" will be the topic Nov. 20. The idea is that death is a part of life and not necessarily a crisis event. However, there may be many phases or stages in the process of dying, which will be explored by the Rev. Wayne Rydberg, pastor of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, Menasha. Rydberg has worked with a special clinic on death and dying in a Chicago hospital and he will examine the feelings of the dying person which can and should be shared with others during the process. He also is cofounder of the Death and Dying Workshop at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah.

"Celebrating Life and Death" will be the topic Dec. 4. The Rev. Don Collins, United Ministry in Higher Education leader, who will be the moderator for the series, will present the idea that death may be best understood as an eventual part of life and as such, the most appropriate response to it is of celebration.

The fee is $10 for the entire program and $2 for a session. Preregistration is requested and may be made to: "Crisis of Change," College of Continuing Education, UWO, Oshkosh 54901. Colette Schneider is in charge of the registrations.

According to the leaders, this particular topic was selected to help people understand and cope with death. Few topics are of greater concern, they have pointed out, but the fact that "our discussions about it often fail to progress beyond the level of humor is a strong indication of our inability to deal with it maturely."

Tietjen, pastors who charged heresy, to meet

ST. LOUIS — The two pastors who brought charges of heresy against the Rev. John H. Tietjen, president of Concordia Seminary here, must meet with him again before continuing with the process which could lead to his ouster as head of the school.

The board of control of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod met Oct. 15, but took no action regarding the controversial president.

At an earlier meeting, the board had suspended Tietjen. That was thrown out by the board after the synod's committee on constitutional matters ruled that due process had not been followed.

If the meetings of Tietjen with the two ministers who filed the charges fail to reach an amicable solution, the matter goes directly to the board of control of the seminary.

One of the two men to file the charges of heresy is the Rev. Leonard P. Buelow, of Green Bay.

Sisters mark anniversaries at Bay Settlement

BAY SETTLEMENT — Three of the six Sisters of St. Francis who observed their anniversaries of entering the order are from or work in the Valley.

Sister Marie Therese Kintziger, originally from Detroit, is working as a homemaker for Holy Angels Church, Darboy.

Sister Joan Breider, a native of Mishicot and a graduate of Marquette University, is involved in pastoral work and adult education at St. John, Little Chute.

Sister Bridget Stumpf, a native of Darboy and a master's degree recipient of the University of Detroit, is the community's director of education and treasurer general as well as chairman of its finance committee.

All observed their silver anniversaries and publicly renewed their vows to the order.

Men from Sister Bay to sing at Fox River

The "Singing Men," a group from Sister Bay, will present a concert at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Fox River Baptist Church.

They will be under the direction of Melvin Kasen. The men have been singing together for a number of years and are currently on concert tour. The event is open to the public.

Alliance to observe Reformation Sunday

The Appleton Christian and Missionary Alliance Church will observe Reformation Sunday with a discussion on the National Association of Evangelicals, of which it is a member.

The Rev. Richard Colenso, pastor, will use as his theme "Speaking the Truth in Love," at the 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. services.

Teaching religion

"Get Involved" is the theme of the American Education Week, and some of the people in the community do it at the very top level — teaching itself. The Rev. Rolland Ehlke, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church, Little Chute, teaches religion to students at Fox Valley Lutheran High School. He is one of two ministers to fill in until a call can be extended to an assistant principal. The Rev. Frederic Zaring, Town of Center, is the other pastor. (Post-Crescent photo)

Ebenezer UCC, Chilton, will mark 90th anniversary Sunday

CHILTON —Ebenezer United Church of Christ will observe its 90th anniversary at the 8 and 10:15 a.m. and 7:45 p.m. services Sunday.

Speakers for the event will be the Rev. Roland Kley, of the United Theological Seminary; the Rev. E.L. Hennig, Plymouth, and the Rev. Harvey Kandler, Kaukauna.

The decorations for the chancel were made by Mrs. John Dombrock. The anniversary cakes were baked by Mrs. David Pilling, Mrs. Dean Pingel, Mrs. John Pagel, Mrs. Ruben Schmidlekofer, Mrs. Arthur Rusch Sr. and Mrs. Lorna Schoen.

The church was organized Oct. 18, 1883 as the German Evangelical Reformer Ebenezer Congregation. The first years were filled with inner turmoil — insufficient funds, pastor resignations (five in nine years) and division of members.

A call to the Rev. William Arpke in the late 1980s marked a turning point. He stayed for 40 years. The congregation grew to 300 and many groups for the women and young people were organized, a parsonage was erected and both German and English services were provided.

Hennig was pastor from 1933 to 1946. He will return Sunday to preach in the sanctuary he remodeled. Eventually, a new parsonage was built and an educational program and a parking lot were added. All debts were retired in November, 1972.

Members of the anniversary committee are Ed Dederig, Mrs. Herman Schmeiser, Calvin Schmah and Susan Walker.

To mark the anniversary, the bell tower was repaired, storm windows were installed in the sanctuary and the addition was redecorated.

An old-fashioned ice cream social with displays from the 1900s will complete the anniversary program.

Lutheran membership slipped slightly in 1972

GENEVA — Total Lutheran membership around the world slipped slightly last year, according to a survey by the Information Bureau of the Lutheran World Federation.

The global confession now counts around 73.3 million, a drop from 73.5 registered the previous year.

The survey, which is conducted annually, combines totals reported by churches employing scientific statistical methods and churches using estimates and other procedures.

Discovery 73 to be relived

A video tape of "Discovery 73," the all-Lutheran youth gathering in Houston, Tex., last summer, will be shown Sunday at Faith Church.

The tape was made for television and shown on national TV but pre-empted in this area. However, the station has provided a tape for private showing.

A barbecue dinner will begin the evening at 6 p.m. It will be sponsored by the youth group. A short devotion to share the experience in Houston with the congregation is also planned.

It is under the direction of Richard Carter, education director at Faith, who accompanied the group to Houston. About 100 youths from the Valley attended.

The theme was, "With Eyes Wide Open," and the purpose of it was to "seek to affirm the diversity of the church and to witness to our oneness in Christ. A life in Christ leads in many ways. It shows us ways to witness. Serve and live."

It was a Key 73 event, calling the youth to repentance, reflection, prayer, to the Word of God, to new life, to proclamation and to commitment.

The following speech was written by James Ormson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ormson, 1720 Briarcliff Drive. Jim, now a student at Valparaiso University in Indiana, attended the Houston event.

He delivered the speech in church shortly after his return as an effort to

Pastoral counseling center director lists purposes

The goals of the Appleton Pastoral Counseling Center will remain the same as before, with a number of minor changes announced by the new director, Bedford F. Hines III.

Hines, who took over the center located in the First Congregational United Church of Christ complex, has begun his duties. He will be ordained to the United Presbyterian Church in early November in his native St. Louis.

He is a graduate of DePauw University and holds a bachelor of divinity degree in philosophy and religion from Yale Divinity School.

He has been involved in a number of advanced pastoral care and counseling programs and has done graduate work at Boston University, from which he holds a masters degree in pastoral counseling.

Hines has had experience in numerous hospitals and institutions and

Bedford
Hines

most recently served as counselor at the Newport, R.I., counseling center.

According to the new director, the Appleton center will be open to anyone who needs counseling, as in the past, regardless of his church membership or ability to pay.

There will be a sliding scale, according to the income of the person involved, but it will not exclude anyone regardless of ability to pay.

Hines' hours will be flexible and he will arrange his time to meet the needs of the people. The appointments should be made with the secretary at 739-9319.

While there is no specific criterion for religion, Hines did explain that the center is a "pastoral counseling center," and is therefore a specific ministry. "That means anyone is welcome, including and especially clergymen who may need its services," he added.

Among the services available are premarital and marital counseling, religious or existential counseling, group therapy, and adolescent counseling.

Middle East becomes complicated

The almost hour-by-hour changes in the military and political events surrounding the Middle East war make it not only hazardous but foolhardy to anticipate or even make a qualified guess as to the eventual outcome of the maneuverings by the parties directly involved in the conflict as well as the Soviet Union and the United States.

Just when a cease-fire brought cautious optimism that it could lead at long last to meaningful negotiations toward a permanent peace by the Middle East nations, the hassle developed over reports that the Russians might unilaterally send troops to enforce the cease-fire. Americans were shaken early Thursday by the reports that our military had been put on alert as a precautionary measure, pending the outcome of our efforts to convince the Russians not to send troops. We believe most Americans agree with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger that "it is inconceivable that the forces of the great powers should be introduced in numbers that would be necessary" to enforce a cease-fire.

Shortly after, the United Nations Security Council voted without dissent to send a peacekeeping force to the Middle East with the stipulation that the U.N. force would not include any troops of the major powers. The U.N. force can be a moral if not military means of keeping the warring factions honest on observance of conditions of the cease-fire. A peacekeeping force including major power troops would be suspect because each of them has its own axe to grind as far as ultimate settlement of the Middle East problem is concerned.

While the big powers should not impose peace conditions on the Middle East combatants, they must continue to spare no effort to convince both Israel and the Arab countries to enter meaningful negotiations for peace. The experience of both sides since 1948 should convince them of the utter futility of intermittent wars which sap their human and material resources and bring only uneasy truces in the absence of all-out conflicts.

One or two Koreas?

There was little opposition within Germany to the application and admittance of both parts of Germany as independent nations to the United Nations. But it isn't working out so easily for Korea.

When North and South Korea announced plans for peaceful coexistence more than a year ago, it seemed obvious that each would have to accept the permanence of the other. But apparently there were doubts. South Korean President Chung Hee Park declared martial law a year ago because of the "rapidly changing international situation around us." He managed to get his constitution through without much opposition, plus a fourth six-year term. Martial law often helps in that regard.

But President Park did not get North Korea to agree to his formula for United Nations membership. Although then United States Secretary of State Williams Rogers backed dual membership, insisting that it "would offer no obstacle in the long term step by step process which must precede the peaceful unification of the peninsula," the government in Pyongyang did not agree. Instead it backed joint membership, the delegation to be split among North and South Koreans. President Park refused this maneuver which he saw as a beginning of complete control by the North. Both countries currently have observers at the U.N.

However, the deadlock has made one major change in South Korean diplomatic relations. Like the Nationalist Chinese on Taiwan, South Korea has followed the policy of withdrawing diplomatic recognition from countries which extend that privilege to the Communist regime. President Park has now agreed to exchange diplomatic delegations with Indonesia which also recognizes the government in Pyongyang. Other countries are likely to follow suit.

Will the North Korean government then close down embassies? It seems unlikely since diplomatic relations are an advantage that membership in the United Nations, prestigious as it may be, is not. More than that, North Korea would be giving up something tangible instead of a mere opportunity.

The policy does seem to perpetuate the de facto principle of two Koreas. But unification must take time if it is not to be the bloody kind, and the recognition of reality — in Germany, Vietnam, Korea, Ireland — would seem to be a first step toward any kind of government.

This John Doe was productive

A Menomonee Falls chemical salesman this week was sentenced to nine months in jail, fined $5,000 and placed on probation for five years after pleading guilty to 15 counts of bribing public officials to buy his products.

The sentencing in Oshkosh came as the result of evidence developed by a John Doe inquiry launched by the attorney general's office into municipal buying practices. The salesman was accused of offering federal savings bonds or 10 per cent merchandise kickbacks to public officials buying his products. Several local government officials already have been sentenced on charges growing out of the same inquiry.

That is the way laws governing public purchases are supposed to work in Wisconsin. Other counties and states would be better off with the same strict attitude. The salesman's sentence makes quite an interesting footnote for comparison to the $10,000 fine and three years of unsupervised probation received by former vice president Spiro Agnew.

Holes in the ice

In the barrel of Watergate news, this will go down as nit-picking. But the General Services Administration has reported in an official memo that "the President does not like ice cubes with holes in them."

Among other things, GSA is in charge of government buildings and equipment — like those which are supposed to be needed for government operations at President Nixon's Key Biscayne home. GSA reported that more ice was needed by the Secret Service and military contingents which are assigned to Key Biscayne when the President is there.

So GSA bought a new ice-making machine — one which makes ice cubes without holes — and installed it on a portico of the President's house.

One reaction will be that the President still is using government money for his own pleasures. There is another side, bureaucracy falling all over itself to meet the wishes of an all-knowing chief executive — even to the best kind of ice cubes.

We had thought Watergate was supposed to have ended all that.

Big unions split on unemployment pay

MADISON — The political honeymoon with the business community that was signaled by the Democrats with the spectacular tax concessions earlier this year does not extend to those issues that involve their valued allies in the big labor organizations, recent events have shown.

The most important labor issues in this state-house political term involves amendments to the Unemployment Compensation Act, and the political lineup reflects precisely the close association of labor funds and labor campaign manpower with Democratic legislative nominees in recent years.

Fail to follow recommendations

But the issue this year is greater than the political prestige of the unions. At stake is a unique advisory system of periodical adjustment of the unemployment compensation law that has operated to the satisfaction of all parties, workers, employers, and the public — until now. The refusal of the Democrats, at the urging of some elements of organized labor, to follow the recommendations of the statutory advisory group on revisions this year may scuttle that mechanism.

The quarrel is not about duration of benefits, or coverage or amounts to be paid to the employee who is laid off, temporarily or permanently.

The stubborn, unyielding division is on the question of when the benefits begin.

The law now provides for a waiting period of one week before an employee who is out of work gets his first compensation check from the state to which employers pay taxes to finance a benefit reserve.

The United Auto Workers, who now have a representative on the advisory commission by appointment of the Democratic state Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations, insist that benefits should be paid immediately upon a lay-off. Because of the long supported rule that the advisory group won't support changes unless they are endorsed unanimously by its members, the consultative machinery broke down.

The UAW and other unions went one way, the public and management representatives similarly acted according to their interpretation of their own interest.

Probable result: The Democratic Assembly will endorse the UAW version and the Republican Senate will scuttle the whole package, the uncontested merits of its many other provisions, notwithstanding. Thus hundreds of thousands of employed citizens of Wisconsin will probably be deprived of a strengthening of the job loss indemnity law in other respects that would be important to them.

It will be difficult for the disinterested citizen, not to mention hundreds of employers who face higher levies to make good the deficits in the reserve accounts of a few others employing UAW members worrying about the model change lay-offs, to support the idea of instant unemployment compensation. The implicit assumption has always been that an employee ought to make a reasonable effort to find alternative employment.

Difficult for others

It will be difficult also for other unionized employees, notably in public services who worry about losing the coverage in the system they had demanded, because of an essentially trivial dispute.

So important are the potential losses in the event of a stalemate, indeed, that some shrewd statehouse watchers wonder if there are other considerations that have not yet been acknowledged. Is this a sign of a struggle for power or competition for prestige between two of the top labor organization men in the state?

Ray Majerus is the new district director of the UAW. John Schmitt is the head of the Wisconsin AFL-CIO. The Schmitt-led federation has faithfully supported the consensus method of labor law revision. Majerus insisted upon a showdown, and as far as clout with Democrats is concerned, he has demonstrated it, in the Assembly.

Fourth Middle East war may be longest

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In its 25 stormy years as an independent state, Israel has been embroiled in four wars with her Arab neighbors and this time she found the hurdles higher.

The latest conflict exploded with Israel outmanned on land, air and sea. The authoritative Institute for Strategic Studies claimed that the Israelis could field enough reservists to bolster a standing army of close to 300,000. It said Egypt and Syria could mount a total of about 430,000 fighting men.

Not since 1948 when Arab states violently opposed to establishment of Israel tried to push the fledgling nation into the sea, had the Israelis been on the defensive in the initial stages of the conflict. But this time Israel charged that Egypt and Syria struck first. U.N. observers supported the claim.

Twenty-five years ago, the Arab assault on the Israeli immigrants who had flooded the territory known as Palestine after World War II backfired. That war preserved Israel's independence and extended her borders beyond those envisaged by U.N. mediators when the fighting ended in 1949.

In the 1956 war, the Israelis with help from France and Britain, struck first in the Sinai Peninsula, after President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt had nationalized the Suez Canal.

Within five days, the Israelis had captured most of the Egyptian-occupied peninsula and thousands of prisoners. But the Israelis, the British and the French withdrew from Egyptian territory under pressure from the United Nations and after establishment of a U.N. peace-keeping force.

In 1967 U.N. truce observers were ordered out of Egypt by Nasser and war broke out that June. That time Israeli jet planes struck swiftly at Egyptian and Syrian targets destroying hundreds of planes and tanks in the first few hours.

Within six days, Israel had reoccupied the Sinai Peninsula, seized the Golan Heights in Syria and a piece of Jordan and took over the whole city of Jerusalem which it had shared with Jordan.

When the dust had cleared in 1967, Israel found itself with 26,000 square miles of Arab territory. For the first time it had defense perimeters it considered actually defensible.

Diplomatic efforts to settle the running conflict stalled on the issue of Israeli withdrawal from lands occupied in 1967.

The U.N. Security Council tried to solve the issue with a resolution calling simultaneously for Israeli withdrawal and Arab recognition of Israel as a sovereign nation. But this touched off another dispute, with the Arabs arguing that the resolution required the Israelis to pull out of all occupied territory and Israel insisting that it meant only certain areas.

Military term to get court test

This term the Supreme Court is confronted by a case in which I have a deep personal interest. The Uniform Code of Military Justice contains a provision penalizing "all conduct of a nature to bring discredit upon the armed forces," but a federal tribunal has held this to be unconstitutionally vague. One of the basic principles of justice is that one must be able to discover in advance the nature of criminal behavior. Ignorance of the law is no excuse, but if the statute or regulation is so ambiguous that one really can't find out what it means, the Fifth Amendment can be used to strike it down.

My personal interest in this provision was forcibly aroused in the spring of 1943 — when it was the 96th Article of War. I was taking my basic training in the Army at Camp Lee, Va., loving every minute of it, when the 96th first entered my life. On a Saturday morning we had a full-field inspection: everything we possessed laid out, the bed made so tightly a silver dollar would bounce, and razor, toothbrush, toothpaste, and the like spread on top of the pack. Into the barracks came a major, accompanied by a sergeant with a notebook, somebody yelled "TEN HUP," and we all braced.

Comes the major

The major, carrying one of those little British sticks under his arm, came stalking down the center. He nailed somebody for shoes insufficiently shined; the sergeant made a note. He spotted a bed too slack; the sergeant made a note. Then he reached me.

"Look at that kit, soldier." "Yes." "Yes WHAT?" "Yes, I'll look at my kit." "Yes, sir! When you speak to an officer, you say SIR." "Okay, sir." The sergeant was making out what looked like a shopping list. So I turned and looked at my kit.

"What's wrong with it, soldier?" "I don't know." "You don't know what?" "I don't know what's wrong with it." "SIR," he bellowed, jumping up and down like an aggravated rabbit. What the hell; "I am sorry, sir, but, sir, I don't know, sir, what is wrong with the kit, sir." Still in full voice, he roared, "The toothbrush is backwards!" What could I do? I burst into laughter, as did the rest of the barracks — which had been following this fascinating dialogue with rapt interest. He almost had apoplexy.

"Sergeant, arrest this man and take him to the orderly room." Arrest? Arrest! Was this some sort of bad joke? Could they send you to a penal colony for laughing? Then the awful thought occurred to me that it was not impossible and — frankly — I was scared. The sergeant, a decent bird who had to work with that jerk, was, however, reassuring: "He's just going to bounce you with a summary under the 96th." It sure was summary, though fortunately not up to my fears: every Sunday for the rest of my stay I was out on the rifle range in the pits pulling targets. All this for (as I recall the old formulation) "for conduct unbecoming a soldier."

It extends to colleges too

The armed forces were not the only place you could find this convenient net to drop over the head of an eccentric. Until recently most colleges and universities had in their catalogues a flat statement that one could be expelled for "conduct unbecoming a student." Moreover, there was usually no appeal from the administrative decision. When I was a graduate student at Cornell a man was expelled for living in private quarters off-campus with his girl friend. The University Proctor broke in without a warrant, but the student (a veteran) had no appeal — he was kicked out and that was that.

It will be interesting to watch the Supreme Court bite this bullet. I will spare you the details of my other encounters with "the 96th," but the point was always the same: when they couldn't get you on a hard rap, out came the flypaper accusation of conduct unbecoming a soldier. I hope the Supreme Court will give it a quiet burial.

Government now trying blackmail

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

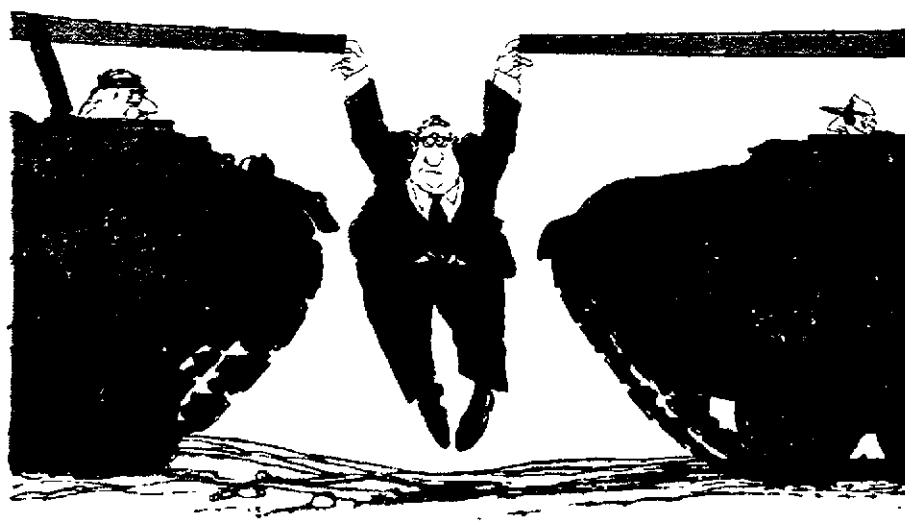

It would seem as though the federal government can't get their own way so now they are trying blackmail. Last week's paper had the following headlines: "State faces $900,000 aid loss." Unless Wisconsin repeals the law banning display and advertising of contraceptives and sale to unmarried persons they will take away aid to the disabled, the blind and persons over 65. What a Godless thing to do?

As a fore-runner of this, the federal government took over the monthly payments to these people from the social services and put the money as coming from social security. I wondered why? Is this a government of the people by the people and for the people? It is becoming a big federal and state take-over, as last week's headlines clearly show: "Counties fighting state take-over," "Broad police reform urged with Federal funds," "80% of local police departments to be abolished," "State power grab attacked by atty. General Warren," to state just a few. This is serious! Wake up America, we are being sold down the river by our power-grabbing politicians. Write a protest to your representatives.

Use tennis balls for a halloween stunt

BY CAPPY DICK

If you can round up one or more discarded table tennis balls, you can have a lot of fun turning them into rolling pumpkin faces.

Use it in a variety of ways. One thing to do is to roll the ball across the floor. It will look funny as the face appears and disappears as the ball turns.

Another way is to bat it back and forth between yourself and a friend as in regular table tennis.

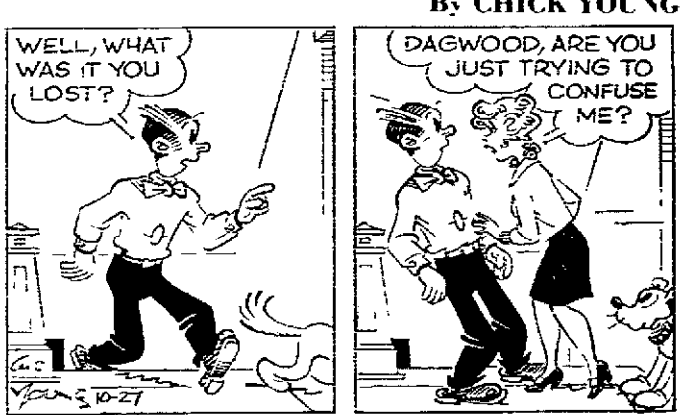

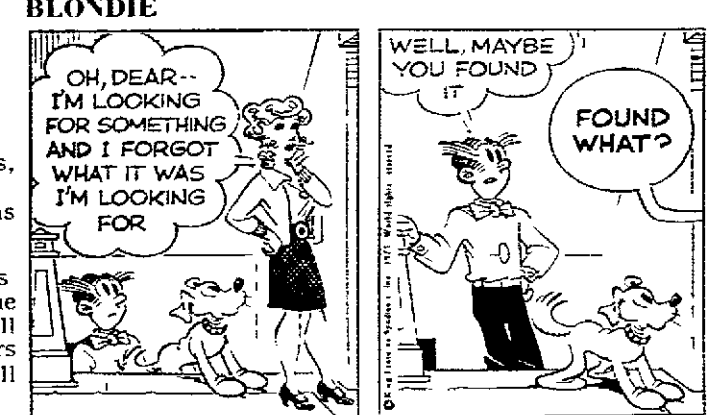

Still another thing to do is to bounce it on the floor or sidewalk as you walk along.

You'll think of other stunts if you are planning a Halloween party for your young friends and can find enough old table tennis balls. You can prepare one for each party guest. They probably would like to take the balls home with them as souvenirs from your party.

Monday, lots more good fun for every boy and girl!

roduced earlier in the day for Congress to choose a special prosecutor who would be responsible to Sirica.

The North Carolina Democrat said of Nixon's plan to name a new special prosecutor: "We've heard that before."

Leaders of the President's party in Congress and elsewhere praised his entire performance.

"It was a cool, reassuring performance in a very tense, hostile atmosphere," said Senate Republican whip Robert P. Griffin of Michigan. "He demolished myths about his ability to govern under fire."

Chairman George Bush of the Republican National Committee said, "The President projected a confidence that will be most helpful in easing the unrest over recent events on both the domestic and international scene."

Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin called Nixon's proposal for Acting Atty. Gen. Robert Bork to appoint a new Watergate prosecutor "almost an insult to Congress." He said was completely wrong and absolutely unacceptable.

"I thought the president's vendetta with the press reached a new low," the Wisconsin Democrat added. "No case has been made that the press is vicious or unfair or one-sided."

But Proxmire said Nixon's depiction of his action on the Middle East crisis was impressive "and with respect to results, he seems to have gotten them."

But another Wisconsin Democrat, Rep. Henry Reuss, said Nixon "didn't reveal to us any facts on what is happening" in the Middle East.

He said that if Nixon had put American troops on alert as a bluff, he was taking part in a dangerous game.

"If not, if he intended to take the U.S. into war with the Soviets in the Middle East, it would have been wise to discuss the matter first with the American Congress and people," Reuss said.

Reuss also said American citizens would not be satisfied with what he called a "housebroken prosecutor" appointed by Bork.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., also said Nixon's proposal for a new Watergate prosecutor was not acceptable to him. He said that if the new appointee doesn't make decisions acceptable to Nixon, the president will fire him too.

But Wisconsin's top ranking Republican officer holder, Atty. Gen. Robert Warren, said he was pleased with Nixon's decision on the matter.

If the man does his job with the kind of vigor the people expect," Warren said, the air will be cleared.

Warren said he considered Nixon's attitude on the Middle East forceful.

Assembly doesn't act on impeachment move

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Democratic-dominated Wisconsin Assembly balked in a sober midnight debate Friday on a resolution to support the impeachment of President Nixon.

The resolution, which cites the President for his initial failure to give up Watergate-related tapes despite a court order and for his firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox, was sent to the Assembly State Affairs Committee on a 56-41 vote.

The committee chairman, Rep. Edward Jackmonus, D-Waukesha, vowed the issue would not die in his panel, but would be scheduled for extensive public hearings.

The measure urges Congress to impeach the President if he does not resign.

The hour-long debate was dominated by Democrats, with only one Republican, Minority Leader John Shabaz of New Berlin, standing up to talk on the emotional issue.

"I support President Richard Nixon," Shabaz said. "I believe the President has been acting as best he can under the serious problems which have confronted him."

Other lawmakers listed events which have marred the administration and argued the state legislature is obligated to make its views known to both its constituents and Congress.

"Magruder, La Rue, Dean: guilty," intoned Rep. Michael Ferrall, D-Racine in reference to former administration officials. "Stans, Mitchell: indicted. Halderman, Erlichman: resigned and under investigation."

"We have had burglary, forgery, perjury, bribery, obstruction of justice, illegal wiretapping. We have had deception and corruption unparalleled in the history of this country," he said.

Rep. Harout Sanasarian, D-Milwaukee, argued Congress was as guilty as the President in bringing about the incidents.

"He wouldn't have gotten away with as much as he did if the Democratic Congress didn't let him," Sanasarian said of the President.

He then requested and received permission to be excused from the rest of the impeachment debate.

Rep. Gary Johnson, D-Beloit, said he had been in doubt about whether he supported the Assembly resolution, but Nixon's news conference Friday night changed his mind.

"I think the President should consider resigning, based on his actions tonight," Johnson said.

One Democrat, Eugene Dorff of Kenosha, argued the Wisconsin Legislature had no business involving itself in the issue of impeachment.

"If you think for one minute that what we are doing is right, you are wrong," Dorff said. "I don't think it's any one of our prerogatives in here."

The setting aside of the resolution made it unlikely the measure would be brought to a final vote in the Assembly.

UAW settles with Ford

DETROIT (AP) — With a new contract covering its 185,000 members at Ford Motor Co. in hand, the United Auto Workers still faces stiff negotiations with General Motors Corp.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock said Friday he wasn't ready to set a schedule for negotiating the GM pact but will discuss the union's next step in a Monday meeting of the International Executive Board.

The meeting was called after the UAW reached tentative agreement on a national contract with Ford only hours before a strike deadline Friday.

The three-year pact goes to the 200-member UAW Ford Council Tuesday and then to ratification votes at the UAW's 97 Ford bargaining units.

In addition, the union has yet to reach local agreements to supplement the national contract at about half of Ford's facilities.

Chrysler Corp. has signed its new contract with the auto workers, reached during a nine-day walkout last month. American Motors' national contract is up for renewal next fall.

Terms of the Ford agreement were withheld pending the meeting of the Ford Council, but they were reportedly similar to those negotiated at Chrysler. Sources said the union won an additional victory of early retirement for Ford's 9,000 foundry workers.

with the issues of campaign finance reform and power plant site selection.

The campaign finance bill has been described as important to avoid future scandals such as the Watergate matter.

Some urgency has been attached to the power plant site selection bill because of plans by a number of Wisconsin utilities to build a new nuclear generating plant in the state.

The Assembly's fuel allocation bill would require registration by wholesalers, jobbers or refiners with the PSC of petroleum products, including gasoline, kerosene, diesel fuel, fuel oil, coal and some other forms of fuel.

The lower house amended the bill to exclude PSC action on liquefied petroleum gas, a form of fuel often used by farmers.

The petroleum dealers would be required to keep detailed records of their transactions, and the PSC would be authorized to inspect the documents.

Supporters of the bill said the requirements were necessary for the commission to gather information on fuel supplies.

Dealers who failed to comply with the registration requirement, failed to supply information requested by the PSC or refused to let the commission inspect their records would be subject to fines of up to $1,000 per day.

Rep. Kenyon Giese, R-Sauk City, complained the bill gives too much power to the PSC and could end up hurting the oil industry.

"This gives the PSC carte blanche to do anything it wants," he said.

Rep. John Alberts, R-Oconomowoc, said the stringent requirements of the fuel bill would force petroleum dealers to leave Wisconsin.

"All you're going to do for those companies on the verge of leaving is push them over the cliff," he said.

But Majority Leader Anthony Earl, D-Wausau, called Alberts' claim a scare tactic. "I put no credence in that argument at all," he said.

The Senate adjourned Friday night after debating the GOP proposal urging that Lucey and the state Agricultural Department take whatever steps they believe necessary to head off the threatened fuel shortage.

Democrats argued the resolution was meaningless and that the PSC should be given authority to regulate fuel distribution. Democratic Minority Leader Fred Risser of Madison called the GOP resolution "a fraud — a meaningless piece of paper."

Republican Sen. James Devitt of Greenfield was the lone member of his party to join minority Democrats in opposing adjournment. He said there were still bills he wanted to see acted upon.

Most legislators contacted after adjournment indicated they were not anxious for Lucey to call them back into a special session.

"It would be untimely for him to call us back until he makes a better case for a special session," said Senate Majority Leader Raymond Johnson of Elleva.

"He hasn't done his homework," Johnson added in reference to the Assembly's refusal to send the fuel bill to the Senate while the upper house was still in session.

Judge rejects pregnant girl's abortion plea

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The attempt by a 13-year-old pregnant girl to have a guardian appointed for her who would approve an abortion was rejected Friday by County Court Judge Michael Sullivan.

Sullivan said the disapproval of the girl's mother to an abortion did not make her so unsuitable that he would have to appoint a guardian.

Experts who testified in favor of the abortion did not advise her about other alternatives, Sullivan said, "thereby inducing her erroneous belief that abortion was the only out of the predicament."

A doctor and two psychiatrists had testified in favor of the girl's request.

"The experts' opinions of the pregnancy's dire effect on the girl's health and schooling are flimsy and unsubstantial," he said.

The 13-year-old girl, who gave birth to a child in May and is about four months pregnant with her second child, has been living in a county institution. Her first child is living with an aunt.

Island annexations get final approval

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Measures which would permit the licensing of physician assistants and allow cities to annex town islands were given final legislative approval Friday in the Wisconsin Assembly.

But the lower house refused to agree with the Senate version of an inland rehabilitation bill, and a conference committee was set up to work out minor differences on that proposal.

The physician assistants bill, sent to Gov. Patrick J. Jucey, would allow the licensing of qualified people to assist in medical care.

The bill would authorize formation of a physicians assistants undergraduate program at the University of Wisconsin, and set aside about $350,000 to conduct it. The UW Board of Regents would have to submit a proposed curriculum to the legislature in January.

The measure would prohibit the use of physicians assistants in certain licensed professions such as podiatry, dentistry and chiropractic.

Proponents of the bill argued the assistants are needed to help solve shortages in health care personnel.

The town islands bill would allow municipalities to unilaterally annex township land of 65 acres or less which is surrounded by municipal territory.

Final approval of the physician assistants and town island bills came when the Assembly adopted conference committee reports which worked out differences of opinion between the two houses.

Stock sale bill clears Senate 29-0

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A bill designed to cut down on livestock thefts in Wisconsin by requiring shipping and sales documents was passed by the state Senate and sent to the Assembly on a 29-to-0 vote today.

The bill does not require branding of cattle, but it would allow the state to confiscate and sell livestock if there is insufficient evidence of ownership.

Under the proposal, if an owner did not have a brand registered with the Department of Agriculture, he would be required to give other proof of ownership.

If sufficient proof of ownership was not established, the measure would allow the department to sell the stock and keep the proceeds.

Purchasers would also be required to keep records on all sales.

The bill would prohibit transporting cattle on any highway unless it was accompanied by shipping documents setting for the number of cattle being shipped and a description of the animal, including brand if any, the name and address of the owner and the point of origin and destination.

Sen. Walter Chilsen, RWausau, said cattle thefts have been on the rise, citing 369 incidents of livestock stolen since Jan. 1.

The thefts involved 1,700 stolen animals at an estimated loss of $200,000, Chilsen said.

However, Sen. Ernest Keppler, R-Sheboygan, questioned whether requiring shipping documents would halt rustling.

Conference to examine student of the future

GREEN BAY — Higher education and how it relates to the growing demand for life-long learning opportunities will come into focus during a conference Thursday at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay.

The regional parley, titled "Learning Society: Responding to a Buyer's Market," is one of 50 in the nation and six in the midwest scheduled this month and November. All are sponsored by the American Association for Higher Education (AAHE) and are open to the public.

Sessions during the morning will offer a broad look at who the students of the future will be and what demands they will make on higher education. Afternoon panels will discuss forms of "open" education, student recruitment, non-traditional missions and means, career education, media and instruction and cooperative arrangements among institutions.

Death 'destroyed' Armstrong

By ARTHUR L. SRB
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Karleton Armstrong testified Friday that extensive precautions were taken to avoid injuries in a 1970 antiwar bombing and that he went into shock when he learned a researcher was killed in the explosion.

"That really destroyed me because in my own mind I didn't think there was any way that death could be justified," Armstrong said in Dane County Circuit Court at his presentence hearing.

Armstrong, 27, who has pleaded guilty to arson and second degree murder in the death of researcher Robert Fassnacht, said his co-conspirators had kept the Army Mathematics Research Center under surveillance in an effort to blow it up when there was the least danger of causing death or injuries.

Armstrong's mother was the final witness to take the stand in the two-week long presentence hearing. Sentence is to be pronounced next Thursday.

Mrs. Armstrong said the bombing and other antiwar violence could have been avoided if society had been more aware of the Vietnam war and spoken more forcefully against it.

to establish special districts for rehabilitating inland lakes, and would allow the levying of a tax among the landowners if 51 per cent of them vote in favor of the move.

The tax would be used by the districts to fund at least 10 per cent of its rehabilitation projects, while as much as 90 per cent funding coming from the state.

Reps. Lewis Mittness, DJanesville; William Rogers, DKaukauna, and John Shabaz R-New Berlin, were appointed by the Assembly to serve on the conference committee. Sens. Walter Chilsen, RWausau; Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, and Dale McKenna, DJefferson, were named by the Senate.

Assembly overturns 3 vetoes

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Assembly voted late Friday to override three of 39 vetoes made by Gov. Patrick J. Jucey to the new state budget.

The lower house immediately messaged the vetoes to the Senate, where they must receive a two-thirds vote to override the governor.

Overridden were vetoes in sections of the budget applying to a user fee study by the University of Wisconsin, appropriations for special and executive committees, and legislative approval of new federally funded jobs in state agencies.

The version of the state budget passed by the legislature would have required the Joint Finance Committee and the governor to approve federally funded jobs created by state agencies above the number of positions authorized in the spending plan.

Among vetoes upheld by the Assembly and therefore no longer subject to legislative change were ones which: Require public disclosure of financial interests by public officials; eliminate a proposal for 50 per cent state support of local tax assessor programs, and strike a legislative attempt to freeze five per cent of the UW allocations next year until the university proposes a consolidation of its programs.

Lucey struck out the need for the approval, saying such a procedure would be unwieldy. The lower house voted 76-23 to restore the provision.

It voted 67-32 to restore a request that the UW submit to the legislature a study on whether user fees could be levied against faculty and staff members next year. The fees would earn $1 million in funds now supplied by the state for support of non-instructional activities.

Lucey's veto had changed the requirement so the study would include the possibility of levying user fees against students.

On a 67-31 vote, the Assembly said special and executive committees should be funded with a "sum certain" appropriation of $200,000. Lucey had vetoed the provision to provide a blank check for the committees.

Localities take stand on state issues

MADISON — Wisconsin city and village officials Friday elected a Fox Cities village president as the second ranking officer of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, and adopted formal positions on highway aid reform, municipal labor laws, personal property tax relief and state-imposed limits on local taxes.

The League, winding up its 75th annual conference here, chose Combined Locks Village President Marvin H. Schumacher as first vice president. The holder of the office traditionally is elevated to president the following year.

The League this year elected Wausau Mayor John Kannenberg president. He was first vice president last year. Wisconsin Rapids Mayor Donald F. Penza was chosen second vice president.

Resolutions were adopted with only one minor change from the wording previously published in the League magazine, "The Municipality."

They include measures which:

Fishing license cost debate resolved

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — A compromise that resort area interests have been seeking since July was completed Friday when the Senate voted in 15-day and four-day non-resident fishing licenses for individuals and annual licenses for families.

The Senate, by a 29-1 vote, sent to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey a measure that will tone down the controversial fishing license debate that was generated in July when the 1973-75 state budget authorized the doubling of all non-resident fishing license fees.

Lucey has stated that he would accept a compromise bill that established short-time licenses rather than rolling back license fees. If Lucey signs the bill, it would become effective Jan. 1.

The 15 day license will cost $7 and the four-day $5. The annual family license will be $17.50, replacing the $15 husband-wife combination. The residents sportsman's fee will be reduced from $16 to $15.

The doubling of non-resident fishing license fees sent the individual annual license to $12 and had resort owners claiming that the recreation business would suffer drastically.

Sen. Reuben LaFave, R-Oconto, said the compromise bill would be a boon to the recreation industry.

"Vacationers will still come to Wisconsin because of the temporary license," LaFave said. "The short-term license will draw the long-term license. It will be good public relations and will smooth the waters that were stirred up by the action in the budget."

Marko named Menasha 'teacher of the year'

MENASHA — Leonard Marko, intermediate teacher at Nicolet Elementary School, is this year's nominee from the Menasha School District for Wisconsin Teacher of the Year Award.

Marko has 15 years teaching experience in the Menasha Public Schools. He has served on math and social studies committees and as safety coordinator for the Menasha System.

Though not assigned to do so, he has taken on basketball coaching duties, worked on the development of a K-12 math program and multi-age interdisciplinary units have been developed under his guidance.

Marko makes frequent home calls to visit his students and their parents. He has conducted night astronomy meetings for students and spends weekends on field trips and teaching students how to survey property.

His community activities include teaching Bible classes, membership on the credit committee for the Menasha Employees Credit Union and members in the musicians' union. He performs on the bass guitar and piano.

Marko obtained his bachelor of science degree, and master of arts degree in elementary education at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. In addition, he has an administrative certificate from the University of Wisconsin-Stout and has obtained 30 credits beyond his master's degree.

In recommending Marko for the award, school officials note that he maintains "excellent rapport with students, parents and faculty." He represents to students a friend, advisor and sounding-board. Nicolet School Principal Frank Parsons stated that Marko "has 100 per cent support from students, teachers, parents and administrators. He is really a teacher of every year."

Marko is married and has two daughters enrolled at Menasha High School.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Your column is enjoyed by men as well as ladies. Realizing that people are not alone in their problems, I would like to submit a solution to a baffler that had quite a simple solution.

My mother, who lives alone in a nearby town, has only partial vision, is elderly, quite proud and likes to be independent. She must however, take medication four times each day consisting of two to four different pills with changes on alternate days and weeks for some of the pills. All of this was just too confusing for her.

The problem was solved by marking off sections on a piece of paper or cardboard into the days of the week with the four periods of the day (I used breakfast, lunch, supper and night,) using a heavy line to mark each section.

From the coin dealer's shop, I purchased some small clear envelopes only an inch wide. I placed the pills for the proper periods into envelopes and taped them to the proper spaces.

Usually, I will make this up for a three-week period as it takes time to get out all the prescriptions and to get the "assembly line" organized.

This system has worked well and she knows whether or not she has forgotten to take the pills by looking at the dispensing sheet.

It is hoped that this will be of help to others, and I knew of no better means of getting it to those in need of it than by your column.

Please keep up your good work.

Weldon Poster

P.S. You may have guessed it, I am an engineer.

Three cheers for your mother for having an engineer son to help her keep independent.

That "dispenser" would really help anybody to keep their cool as to "the which and the when."

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

We have a dog which we keep fenced in the back yard. He was always spilling his water and then would toss the water dish around.

We got the best of him by fastening a three-pound empty coffee can to a post. Another smaller can was then set inside the big can.

Now he can't toss his water dish around and always has water when he wants a drink.

Assembly puts 'Armistice Day' back to Nov. 11

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Its lobby filled with veterans, the Wisconsin Assembly gave final legislative approval Friday to a bill which would change the observance of Veterans Day from the fourth Monday in October back to Nov. 11.

The bill would also rename the holiday "Armistice Day."

The vote was 98-1, with Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Shorewood, casting the only negative vote.

Veterans Day was one of several holidays established first by the federal government and then by the state as "Monday holidays" to create three-day weekends.

Veterans and their supporters in the legislature argued that Armistice Day is an historic holiday which should be celebrated on the anniversary of the end of World War I.

Driver hurt when car strikes house

MENASHA — Thomas L. Borski, 23, 623½ Sixth St., Menasha, was injured Friday night when his car went out of control on Garfield Avenue and struck a house.

He was taken to Theda Clark Hospital by Menasha Ambulance shortly after 7 p.m. Police said Borski was headed west on Garfield, west of Railroad Street, when the car crossed the center line and hit the house owned by Howard Young at 223 Garfield. The foundation, front porch and siding were damaged.

Flying cups?

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — The headline read: UFOs Sighted in Oshkosh. Just below it was a picture of a strange object hovering over Dempsey Hall on the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh campus.

The hoax was perpetrated by the staff of the student newspaper, the Oshkosh Advance-Titan, and the reaction was swift.

As soon as the newspaper hit the stands, authorities began receiving calls from concerned citizens.

One dormitory resident telephoned the Advance-Titan office and said, "We have a whole floor full of girls and we don't know what to do."

Police asked local radio stations to inform listeners that the story was a hoax.

Editor Scott Hassett said the saucer effect in the photograph was made by pasting portions of paper cups together and painting port holes on them. They were then superimposed on a picture of a campus dorm.

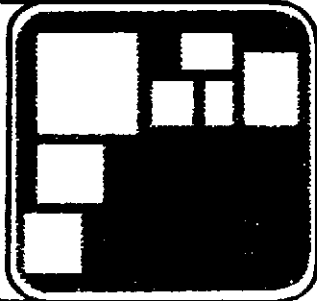

The story said that eight flying saucers flew over Oshkosh and disappeared.

Hassett said he was happy with the reaction.

Horsing around

The speech and drama students at Appleton High School West weren't really horsing around Friday. They were taking part in a high school version of show-and-tell. ## Rogers challenges facts in mayor's attack on state aid, tax limits

Appleton Mayor James Sutherland did not give all the facts in his recent statement criticizing the state Legislature for declining shared tax payments and local tax levy limitations implemented at the same time it increased its own budget by 44 per cent. State Rep. William Rogers, D Kaukauna, has charged.

In a letter to the mayor this week, the Kaukauna Democrat said state aids will actually rise by nearly $400,000 for Appleton in 1974. And those increased aids, along with increased financial help for public and vocational schools and counties, were the reason for the increase in the state budget this year, he added.

Rogers called Sutherland's contention that the legislature sought to control local tax rates but not its own "very misleading."

"During the past several biennia, state property tax relief programs have undergone immense growth," Rogers said. "However, at the same time, local property tax levies have grown even faster — despite the offsetting amounts of state assistance."

Police said they found about 25 persons at the scene. Village ordinance charges, alleging trespassing, will be filed against several persons.

Police said they confiscated drugs, most of it marijuana and amphetamines, and an uncased shotgun that was in one of the cars.

One of the three men jailed was a 22-year-old Kimberly resident charged with failing to obey an officer.

Police from Combined Locks, Little Chute, Kimberly and Outagamie County comprised the seven-man force that went to the scene.

Linda Hoelzer, whose fiance is an inmate at the institution, said the issues which prompted the letter included refusal of the warden and his staff to negotiate complaints with a group of prisoners and their friends and relatives. She said there was harassment of persons who worked to improve visiting conditions.

Gray said there always had been a rule against putting arms around visitors. He said the staff had been lenient about enforcing it until two or three weeks ago when he said excessive hugging and kissing was "getting pretty bad."

He said that the prison formerly had a long table with an eight inch board down the middle separating the visitors and the prisoners.

If there were conjugal visits, he said, "What would you do with the single prisoners, bring in prostitutes?"

Party 'reform' sought by Dane GOP unit

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Chairman David Sullivan of the state Republican committee was asked today by the Dane County Republican executive committee to include a series of party "reform" propositions on the agenda for the special Republican state convention that Sullivan wants to hold in January.

James Haney, a young lawyer who is chairman of the party apparatus in the state's second county, which includes the capital city of Madison, said the demand was prompted by the strong conviction that "state and local Republicans must take the initiative to restore public confidence in the political process by putting our own house in order."

"We simply must will not be a competitive unit in Wisconsin if we retreat to blind allegiance to the status quo and continue the strategem of 'business as usual' he asserted in a letter to the state party leader made public here.

Haney proposed that the January convention be in Madison — Sullivan has not yet indicated his preference for a site — and that its agenda in addition to the disputed issue of party endorsement of candidates for state-wide office nominations it should cover:

1. — The direct election of state party officers by convention delegates. They are now chosen by the state committee members, who in turn are the elected chairmen of district caucuses.

2. — Representation of special mittes. "Special interests," it was explained would include youth, women and other categories.

3. — Delegate selection procedures for state and district conventions. There have been conflicts about selection of convention delegates in Dane county in recent times.

4. — Convention rules and procedures and campaign finance reform.

A spokesman for the Dane County unit said "finance reform" consideration should include an objective study of the Adamany report to Gov. Patrick Lucey that already has been denounced by some prominent Republicans because one of its major proposals is the use of public tax funds to permit candidates to reduce their dependence on special interest contributions from private persons and associations.

Haney's letter to Sullivan said that "the spotlight of public opinion has focused painfully on shortcomings in the national Republican administration. Only aggressive display of Republican open-mindedness and innovation will show the electorate that we recognize our failings and have set out to correct them."

The new Dane county party chairmen, with a group of like-minded younger persons, took over control of the unit two years ago. Among them is Reed Coleman, for a brief period state party chairman and son of the late Thomas E. Coleman, one of the most effective of the state party chiefs in a previous generation of party prosperity.

Senate okays DNR board seat for Fox

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The appointment of Thomas Fox to the Department of Natural Resources Board survived strong opposition by northern state senators Friday and cleared the Wisconsin Senate 20-11.

Though none of the senators speaking against the appointment questioned Fox's credentials, they were critical of his short-term residence in northern Wisconsin. He has lived in Washburn for one year, and was born in Chilton.

Fox unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for secretary of state in 1970. He then served for one year as clerk of the Democratic-controlled state Assembly before he moved to Washburn.

One of the strongest critics, Sen. Daniel Theno, R-Ashland, represents the district into which Fox moved.

Majority Leader Raymond Johnson, R-Eleva, contended the law setting up appointments to the DNR board was designed to assure that "people with knowledge of the area gained over a long period of time" would be selected.

"What we are seeing here is a device to get around that statute," he said.

Sen. Carl Thompson, D-Stroughton, said that since Fox's birthplace was in northern Wisconsin he has some knowledge of the area.

Sen. Gordon Roseleip, R-Darlington, criticized opponents of the appointment for trying to block it on basis of residency.

"We should judge people on their honesty and sincerity," he said. "Even though he just moved up there he's still a resident of the north."

Opponents contended that Gov. Patrick J. Lucey could have appointed a "grass-roots Democrat" from northern Wisconsin.

Democratic Minority Leader Fred Risser of Madison pointed out that four county board chairmen from northern Wisconsin appeared on Fox's behalf at hearings on the appointment.

Facts on fires

Firemen Ron Olm, standing, and Robert Ertl took the message of fire safety to Franklin School during Fire Safety Week. Comparing facts with the two are Colleen Miller and

State Patrol powers widened

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — State Patrol officers would be given expanded arrest powers in a bill given final legislative approval Friday night by the Wisconsin Assembly.

The lower house concurred on a voice vote to a Senate version of the proposal which was approved earlier in the night.

The bill, which has had strong support from patrol officials and some opposition from local law enforcement officers, allows patrolmen to make arrests within 24 hours of a crime or if they believe a warrant has been issued.

The Assembly agreed with a Senate change which requires that patrolmen be on duty and in uniform when they make such arrests.

Man hurt, foul play ruled out

An 87-year-old Appleton man found in his blood-smeared kitchen this morning apparently was not the victim of foul play, according to police.

Herman H. Meinberg, 938 E. El-dorado St., was taken by ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital about 9:45 a.m. after neighbors found him seated on a chair in the kitchen.

Det. Sgt. Ronald Soper said it appeared Meinberg had a large bruise and a cut to his face. He was covered with blood.

Meinberg was conscious, but police were not immediately able to question him in detail.

An open jackknife was found on the living room floor, but police do not believe it was connected with Meinberg's injuries. His wallet was on a bed, the money intact. There was no evidence of forced entry. Meinberg lives alone.

Soper said that a preliminary investigation revealed that Meinberg, who has medical problems, apparently became confused and ransacked the kitchen early today. Kitchen walls and appliances were covered with blood and items including a radio and potted plants were smashed on the floor. Cushions on a living room sofa also were overturned.

Soper said a further investigation is being made.

Insurance legislators elect Lorge president

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Sen. Gerald Lorge, R-Bear Creek, was elected president of the National Conference of Insurance Legislators (COIL) at its annual convention in Atlanta this week.

Lorge, chairman of the Senate Committee on Judiciary and Insurance, was first vice-president of the organization last year. The group includes legislators from all 50 states and has been active for five years.

Patrolmen are now generally just restricted to traffic offenses.

Local law enforcement officials said they feared the bill might open the door to a state police force which would eventually undermine their power.

In other action, the lower house also gave final approval to a bill which paves the way for federal takeover Jan. 1 of programs to aid the aged, blind and disabled.

The measure, mentioned by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey this week as a "must" measure, would authorize the expenditure of about $19 million in state money to keep the aid payments at their present level by subsidizing federal funding. The federal government has promised additional funds to states which provide such supplements.

But the measure was passed without a provision which would have allowed distribution of contraceptives to welfare recipients regardless of their age and marital status. Federal officials have warned that lack of such a provision could cost Wisconsin some Aid to Families with Dependent Children funds.

DNR approves boat channels

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Construction of two boat channels and a boat harbor off Lake Winneconne in the Town of Winneconne, Winnebago County, requested by Russell Grignon, has been authorized in a permit issued by the state Department of Natural Resources.

The channels will be about 1,500 feet long and will connect at the south end with a harbor with a diameter of 500 feet, the agency said.

Prison wives picket for conjugal visits

WAUPUN, Wis. (AP) — The allowing of conjugal visits between inmates and their wives was urged Friday in a letter left by a group of nine women who picketed the State Prison.

The letter said that, when some of the women proposed such visits, the armless chairs in the visiting room were replaced with armed chairs and prisoners could not sit with their arms around visitors.

The document was directed to Warden Ramon Gray. He was in Madison, however, and it was accepted by Harvey Winans, associate warden of security. He refused to meet with the women as a group, but said he would meet with one or two of them at a time. But the women picketed the institution instead until police told them they could not do so without a permit.

Gray said there always had been a rule primarily by liquor retailers, who claimed it was necessary to bring uniformity in the sale of carry-out beer because of unfair competition from grocery stores with Class A licenses and the fact that liquor stores, despite the fact most of them do not stay open past 9 p.m., are blamed for the sale of beer to trouble-makers after 9 p.m.

The supermarket owners and managers rejected every claim made by the liquor retailers and said a stronger case could be made for the prohibition of the sale of milk products after 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"I think we could build a stronger case for a silly law like this than the liquor dealers can for not selling carryout beer after 9 p.m.," read the letter, noting that city health department personnel are not available to answer complaints after 5 p.m. that someone is selling milk or milk products that are not properly refrigerated.

The supermarket operators claimed:

— If liquor establishments "really wanted" to make beer selling hours uniform, they should have urged the same restrictions on taverns. The proposed new ordinance would leave taverns "the only place left for a person to buy a six-pack of beer after 9 p.m. and usually a price 20 per cent higher than what it costs in a supermarket."

The protesters also said that efforts by the retailers to get surrounding municipalities to pass similar laws restricting retail sales of beer is a "pie in the sky" assumption.

—The effort to stop sale of beer to potential trouble makers after 9 p.m., another supporting argument the retail liquor operators used for the ordinance, doesn't stop someone from getting beverage at a tavern.

The letter also claims that retailers never "mentioned a single specific instance or could they get the city chief of police to admit to such a problem."

—Discounted claims by the liquor retailers that grocery store operators, because they did not have to operate under the same license fees and restrictions that liquor stores do, were getting had an "unfair" advantage over liquor stores.

"Why should we follow the same laws as the liquor dealers do, when we do not sell any liquor?" read the letter.

—The prohibition against sale of beer at grocery stores after 9 p.m. will make it "impossible for the biggest single customer of ours who buys beer at the supermarket, the housewife, to purchase beer after 9 p.m."
